CHARLTON TAKEN IN NEW YORK, SAYS HE KILLED WIFE

NEW YORK, June 23.—Porter Charlton, husband of Mary Scott Castle Charlton, the American woman murdered and thrown into Lake Como, Italy, was arrested at Hoboken, N. J., to-day as he landed from the liner Princess Alice of the Bremen Steamship Company, and twenty-five minutes later he made a full statement, confessing that he had murdered his wife.

AT FIRST PROTESTED HIS INNOCENCE.

At first Charlton protested that he was not the man wanted, and that he was Thomas Coleman, but a search brought out no letter or card to show that he was Coleman and did bring out a case with the initial "P. C." on it. Then he said to the Chief:

"I admit that I am the man you want. I am Porter Charlton.

Charlton showed no fear and was cool and collected. He at first stoutly protested his innocence of the murder.

"I did not kill my wife," he said under heavy questioning," and I knew nothing of how she was murdered."

Chief Hayes kept at the prisoner and finally Charlton said he desired to make a statement and have it in writing. Witnesses and pen and ink were brought quickly.

Captain Henry Harrison Scott, U. S. A., brother of the murdered woman, when told by Chief of Police Hayes at headquarters that the man arrested was undoubtedly the young Washington man, cried:

"I'll blow out his brains," and then whipped out of his pocket a big army revolver.

Quick Work Saves Charlton.

Charlton's life was saved only by the quick work of the chief and his detectives who were in the room. They fell upon the army officer as one man, disarmed him and placed him in custody.

Charlton's arrest was the result of cabled advices from Scotland Yard after the sailing of the Princess Alice. The Scotland Yard men had secured information that a man resembling Charlton had booked passage on the ship. Knowing the boat was due to-day, Captain Scott and three Hoboken detectives went to the Bremen Pier and watched the passengers leave the ship. All of them had good descriptions and pictures of the man they wanted and they easily picked out the right one from the crowd.

Charlton at first laughingly denied that he was Charlton but the laughter left his lips, and when he reached police headquarters and found that he was in a net from which he could not possibly extricate himself.

Had Two Dress Suit Cases.

Charlton was pointed out by Captain Scott as he stepped off the gangplank. The man drew back when the officers approached him and laughed.

"I am not Charlton," he said, "you have made a mistake."

But he answered in detail the pictures and descriptions of Charlton, who was known to Captain Scott.

Detective Sergeants Weinthal, Garret and Fallon, assigned to the case by Chief of Police Hayes, took their prisoner to police headquarters. The prisoner carried two dress suit cases, was neatly dressed and of refined manner. He kept his calmness until put through a "third degree" examination by Chief Hayes. His nerve had been shaken by the attempt of Captain Scott to kill him.

"I'll tell you everything," he finally cried. "I can't hide it any longer. It is too terrible a secret to keep."

He then dictated a long statement, telling how he killed Mrs. Charlton, and signed it.

Charlton completely exonerated the Russian, Ispolatoff, who was arrested in Italy after the murder was discovered. Here is his confession:

"My name is Porter Charlton, twenty-one years old. I reside at No. 204 West Fifty-fifth street. My wife and I lived very happily together near Lake Como, Italy. But she had a very ungovernable temper.

Charlton's Story of Tragedy.

"I also have an ungovernable temper. She used such degrading language that it was revolting to me to listen to it, and I know that she did not know the meaning of it. The night I killed her, her language was something terrible. I told her that she would have to stop or I would put a stop to it. She did stop for a while, but then started to berate more than ever in a very short time afterward. I struck her on the head with a wooden mallet. I struck her two or three times and thought she was dead.

"The mallet I hit her with was one that I had been using to straighten the leg of a couch that we had been using. I then put her body in the trunk and threw the mallet in with the body. I then dragged the trunk out of the house and to a small dock that was right near the house. I threw it into the lake. I then went back to the house and stayed in Como the next day. The following day I started in the direction of my own country.

"I see that Ispolatoff has been arrested, but he is entirely innocent, as he had nothing whatever to do with it. I am guilty. I have no defence and I want none.

"PORTER CHARLTON."

MARTIN WALSH IS INDICTED IN BANK LOOT CASE

The United States Grand Jury reported to-day to Judge Colt in the Federal Circuit Court six indictments of persons, all connected with the looting of the National City Bank of Cambridge and the trial of William J. (Big Bill) Kelliher.

Announcement was made that one of the indicted persons is Martin J. Walsh now a fugitive from justice, who is charged with aiding and abetting in the wrecking of the bank at Cambridge. The government has offered a reward for his capture. Kelliher was indicted and convicted on this charge.

Grocer Is Indicted.

Later in the afternoon it was made public that one of the five indictments is against Francis J. Wood, the Shawmut avenue grocer who testified in the Kelliher trial. He is out now under $2,000 bail. He is charged with perjury. There remain four persons indicted whose names have not been made public.

Walsh was indicted in two indictments and on a total of thirty-six counts for offences. He is indicted under the old penal code on thirty-one counts and on four counts under the new penal code. It is stated in the indictment that Walsh uses the name "Jack Leonard." This is the name under which Coleman said he knew Walsh.

Walsh is charged with aiding and abetting in the wrecking of the bank at Cambridge by stealing $119,000 of Coleman's money.

Here Are Specific Offences.

Here are the specific amounts or offences charged against Walsh, with the dates on which it is alleged he took the bank's money from Coleman:

June 3, 1909, $1,000; June 11, $3,000; June 26, $3,000; July 3, $2,500; July 16, $2,500; August 27, $4,000; October 4, $3,000; October 7, $3,500; October 30, $3,500; October 14, $3,000; October 18, $4,000; October 20, $4,000; October 22, $4,500; October 27, $4,000; November 5, $4,500; November 8, $4,500; November 10, $1,000; November 11, $3,500; November 15, $6,000; November 16, $4,000; November 18, $4,000; November 24, $3,000; December 6, $3,500; December 9, $3,500; December 13, $4,000; December 15, $4,000; December 17, 2?, 22, 29 and 31, $3,000 each—all under the old code.

Under the new code the offences are as follows: January 4, 5, 10 and 19, $3,000 each; February 7, $1,000.

The other five indictments are secret. United States deputy marshals, armed with the indictment warrants, at once began the search to arrest the five persons.

The Federal Grand Jury was excused by Judge Colt upon request of United States Attorney French.

George W. Coleman, who is now in jail at East Cambridge, will be taken to the jail at Greenfield within the next day or two to begin his term of fifteen years for wrecking the bank. He will be brought from Boston from time to time to testify in other cases arising out of the wrecking of the bank.

"Big Bill" Kelliher is still in Charles street jail awaiting his release under bail of $50,000. His friends are confident that he will be bailed out within the next few days.

MORGAN RETURNS, IN GOOD HEALTH

NEW YORK, June 23.—Despite various reports that he was dying or seriously ill in different parts of Europe, J. P. Morgan arrived to-day on the White Star liner Adriatic apparently in the best of health.

Mrs. Clarence F. Glover, Widow of Laundry Victim

7 ACCUSED IN LAUNDRY TRAGEDY

Indicted on Charge of Being Accessory to Death of Clarence F. Glover by Concealing Hattie Le Blanc.

Mrs. Lillian M. Glover, widow of Clarence F. Glover, and six of her friends were to-day arrested on indictments charging them with being accessories after the fact to the murder of her husband at Waltham on the night of November 20 last, in that they helped to conceal Hattie Le Blanc in the Glover home.

Indicted and arrested with Mrs. Glover were Samuel D. Elmore and Alton F. Tupper, her attorneys; George A. Freeman and Mrs. Frances I. Freeman, his wife, the most intimate friends of the widow; Seymour Glover, the only one of the five brothers of the murdered man who was remembered in his will, and his wife, Mrs. May Glover.

ARREST CAUSES A GREAT SENSATION.

Like a bolt of lightning from a clear sky came the announcement of the seven new indictments in this remarkable murder case to-day, when all of the defendants were arraigned for trial in the East Cambridge Superior Criminal Court. The indictments had been found by the June grand jury, which closed its sessions last week and the seven arrests had been made without an inkling of the radical move getting to the public.

It was said to-day that in all probability it would be arranged so that Hattie Le Blanc, now held for the murder, will appear as a witness in the trial of the seven newly indicted persons. It was noticed that the accused girl's counsel, Melvin M. Johnson and A. Farley Brewer, were in court when the prisoners were arraigned.

Each Pleads Not Guilty.

The indictments charge that the seven persons arrested, knowing that Hattie Le Blanc had murdered Glover, concealed her in the Glover house after the crime, and that they "are deemed accessories after the fact to the felony and murder."

General Charles W. Bartlett appeared as counsel for Mrs. Glover; former Mayor Daly of Cambridge for the Freemans and Seymour Glovers, and Elmore and Tupper for themselves. Each of the accused persons pleaded not guilty and was held in $2,000 bail. Bonds were furnished for all of the accused persons.

Within an hour a jury had been empanelled and the trial started. A recess was taken to allow the jury to view the scene of the crime in Waltham, the jury reaching Waltham shortly before noon.

News Shocks Cambridge

Judge Stevens came into court at 9.30 a. m. Though the indictments were secret and the sensational developments in the case had been carefully guarded, the news that something new and big had broken in the Glover case seemed to permeate the

JEFFRIES IDOL OF RENO, SAYS NAUGHTON

By W. W. NAUGHTON.

RENO, Nev., June 23.—It is learned that Jim Jeffries and Tex Rickard have disposed of their interests in the moving pictures of the Jeffries-Johnson fight for $75,000. William T. Rock of New York, who is president of the Vitograph Company of America, is the purchaser. Jeffries owned one-third interest in the pictures and Rickard one-sixth. Jack Gleason owns one-sixth and Johnson owns, or did own, one-third.

By the deal consummated with W. T. Rock the company he represents therefore becomes the owner of a one-half interest in the pictures. Of the $75,0000, which already has been deposited in a Reno bank, Jeffries will receive $50,000 and Rickard $25,000.

It is common report that Jack Johnson has disposed of his one-third interest to Sid Hestor and Tom O'Day of San Francisco. The belief is expressed that Gleason will sell his one-sixth to the same parties and if so, Hestor and O'Day on one side and the Vitograph Company on the other will be equal shareholders in the stock of the picture venture.

Reno Pays Homage to Jeff.

Reno made a gala occasion of the arrival of Jim Jeffries and his big party. When the big fighter and the members of his training staff came in yesterday the railroad platform and streets adjoining were crowded. It was not purely a sporting gathering by any means. When the train arrived and the Pullman containing the Jeffries bunch was located there was a swaying and tightening up of the crowd, all anxious to catch the first glimpse of the hope of the white race.

First of all, Sam Berger came down the steps, and there was a scattering cheer for the manager. Jim Corbett was next. Jim's suitcase become jammed in the vestibule outlet, and Jim became red in the face and swollen in the neck while trying to dislodge

A cooling east wind and decreased humidity brought relief to heated Boston this afternoon. Cooler weather is officially promised for to-night and to-morrow.

The record yesterday of three deaths and nearly a dozen prostrations in Greater Boston, it is expected, will not be repeated within the next forty-eight hours at least.

The mercury remained in the seventies in the morning, and in the eighties during the afternoon, as a result of the cooling west wind.

The humidity stood yesterday at 64. To-day it had dropped to 60.

In the sun along Boston's streets to-day the mercury played about in the 90's, but the cool wind helped things along a great lot.

For June 23 in Boston, the coolest record was in 1877, when 77 was the average. The hottest June 23 was in 1896, when 88 degrees was registered.

New England is among the hottest regions in the United States to-day. It is cooler down in New Orleans and the South than in Boston.

CHICAGO DEATHS FROM THE HEAT NOW NUMBER 47

CHICAGO, June 23.—Chicago was left at the mercy of a broiling sun to-day when the wind shifted from off Lake Michigan to the Southwest, blowing up large guests of superheated air from St. Louis and other hot spots. Five more victims have been added to the toll exacted by the intense hot wave, bringing the total dead to forty-seven. This does not include the number of deaths among the infants. The Weather Bureau holds out no immediate promise of lower temperatures. Nearly all lake lines are now running excursions and are doing a rushing business. The highest notch touched by the mercury was 85 degrees on the top of the Federal Building. In the street below the hot rays reflected by the stone sidewalks and asphalt streets added several degrees.

HILLIARD FLIES MILE AND HALF

NEWBURYPORT, June 23.—At a height of forty feet and in a heavy wind, William Hilliard, the Boston aviator, flew a full mile and a half across Plum Island River to-day, the start being made shortly before 5 o'clock with only a handful of spectators present.

The flight was looked upon as an even greater achievement than the five-mile trip made by the Boston man last night, owing to the unfavorable weather conditions existing to-day. Hilliard declares that before another twenty-four hours passed he will break all New England records for aeroplane flights.

ENGLAND'S DEBT TAKES BIG JUMP

LONDON, June 23.—There has been an increase of more than $55,000,000 in the national debt during the past year, according to a statement issued by the treasury, the total deadweight debt being roundly $3,566,000,000 on the first of April and the total gross liabilities $3,812,000,000.

These figures excited bitterness among those who were opposed to what was called the socialistic program of the Lloyd-George budget, for these assert that that budget caused an immense loss in revenue. A somewhat differing though an equally gloomy view is taken in other quarters. The believers in the phantom of a German invasion see only another evidence of the decline of Great Britain.

The country, they assert, is already filled with young men who settle down to a life of sport and who thus live on the resources of the country without adding anything. They had had for the most part no military education and in time of war would be only civilians.

SOLDIERS FIELD, June 23.—"For this is Harvard's Day" was the thought in the minds of the thousands of Crimson sympathizers who filled the immense bleacher stands to see the second battle with Yale on the diamond.

Never did a Harvard team receive greater encouragement to defeat the Yale bulldog. The class day crowds swarmed on the lofty tiers of wooden seats, shouting the Crimson war crys and the destruction of Yale, who had trampled the Harvard colors in the dust down at New Haven last Tuesday, and victory at any cost was the desire of the legion of supporters of Old John on this occasion.

The seating capacity of 13,000 on the field was inadequate for the immense throng that wanted to see Yale trailed in the mire. To be sure the Blue was well supported by a noisy bunch of rooters who made welkin ring with Breka battle hymn and did everything to rattle the sturdy warriors led by Captain anigan and bid defiance to Harvard's banner of arterial blood that was swung to the breeze.

Society, with a capital letter, was on band, and the prosaic bleachers which have witnessed so many defeats and so few victories for Harvard, this season was transformed into a molsaic of color, the beautibul gowns of the fair debutantes and the pretty college girls blending with the gay garments of the care-free collegians.

With "Tessie" Hicks on the mound and primed to make the Elis walk the plank, the undergraduates were confident of victory. The veteran twirler had been saved for this big event, the crucial moment had arrived, and never was he placed in position to become a greater hero.

He felt the great burden resting on his broad shoulders and entered the fray determined that his skill should annihilate the enemy or he be carried on a stretcher from the field.

The Elis were fully aware of the celebrated pitched they faced and counted on Tommers, their invincible flinger, to match Hicks when it came to a test of control and mastery over the batsmen. He had met the Crimson before and was ready to shy his castor in the ring once more in an effort to land the championship for Yale.

Coach Pieper learned a lot in the first duel with Yale and made some radical moves with his lineup before he was willing to show his hand.

Instead of Rogers leading off at the head of the list McLaughlin, the big pitcher and first baseman, was put in to be the first to face the Eli pitcher. Rogers was due to act as second string in the outfield, as Marshall was booked for second place on the batting slate. Then came Captain Lanigan and Potter in the clean-up spots. Hicks, who is as good a batter as he is a pitcher, fills in at the middle place in the hitting formation.

Yale left no gap in her warlike line-up, bringing into use the best she had of diamond material, determined to die hard if ivctory went against her in the Harvard camp.

J. B. HOLDEN DIES TODAY OF HEART FAILURE

Joshua Bennett Holden, one of Boston's richest and most prominent citizens, died of heart failure at his Back Bay home at 10:25 a. m. to-day. The hot wave is believed to have overtaxed his heart while it weakened his vitality.

Mr. Holden was formerly a State Senator and was prominent also as a member of the Charles River Dam Commission. A few years ago he ranked with Republican leaders in this State. Of late he has not been prominent in politics. He was sixty years old and a native of Woburn.

He graduated from the Harvard Law School when twenty-one. Most of his business activities were given to the management of the Joshua Bennett and George Holden estates. He was elected to the House fifteen years ago and served two terms. In 1897 he was elected a Senator and served a second term in the upper branch of the Legislature. He was defeated as a Republican candidate for Governor's Council, but cut down the big Democratic majority in his district.

Mr. Holden was an uncle of Senator George Holden Tinkham. His first public office was membership in the old Common Council of Boston. He had been ill several months. Although Mr. Holden was a rich man, he was very democratic in his manner.

FATAL MISHAP TO BOY IN CHURCHYARD

FALL RIVER, June 23.—Ernest Rioux, the seven-year-old son of Philip Rioux of No. 124 St. Mary's street, died at his home this afternoon from injuries received earlier in the day while climbing on a counter on the grounds of St. Matthew's Church, where the celebration of St. John's day is to be held. The counter toppled over, fracturing the boy's skull and breast bone.

LYMAN SCHOOL TRUSTEES DENY UGLY CHARGES

The trustees of the Lyman School for boys at Westboro issued the following statement to-day:

"The trustees of the Lyman and Industrial Schools have refrained since the very unfortunate death of young Newman from commenting upon the legislative investigation, or from affirming or denying the various charges made at the hearings. We have all felt the greatest sympathy for the parents of Newman, and have regretted more than can be stated in words how much his death is to be deplored.

"We have attempted to secure all information possible, and are testifying frankly and fully before the committee, with the sole hope that some good might come from the thorough investigation now in progress.

"One charge—so serious and so capable of misunderstanding—the trustees feel must be corrected at this time. A letter was read by a representative from Cambridge, no doubt in good faith, from Lewis Emery of Holyoke, stating that his nephew had also committed suicide in the Lyman School some years ago. The trustees knew this to be untrue. Yesterday another letter was received from Mr. Emery, in part as follows:

Superintendent of Lyman School, Westboro, Mass.:

Dear Sir: Regarding statement in the newspapers regarding suicide of my nephew, Henry Lebonte, would say that the name of the institution in which he died was not the Lyman School. It was a mistake I made in naming the Lyman School. I am sorry that my statement to Mr. Reed has caused so much trouble, and I hope this statement will make better feeling. LEWIS E. EMERY.

Sworn to before me June 22, 1910. THOMAS J. TIERNEY, Justice of the Peace.

"Many other statements by discharged employes and others that the trustees felt were gross exaggerations have been let pass unchallenged because we were confident the committee would know how much weight to give to such testimony.

"We desire to remind the public that the Lyman School is not a boys' boarding school but a reform school where boys are sent by the courts because their parents, the public schools, or charitable societies have been unable to control them.

"The Legislative Committee is making a full investigation and until their report is made all citizens who are fair-minded will suspend their judgment."

Queen Mother's Flag Flies Over Buckingham.

LONDON—Since the death of King Edward the royal standard has flown over Buckingham Palace in honor of the Queen Mother, who is still in residence there. As the royal standard is flown only for the monarch the fact that it was used by the Queen Mother was a source of considerable speculation. The only reason for her use of the standard was there was no flag existing for that rarity in Great Britain, a dowager Queen consort. Now, however, a flag has been specially designed and fabricated for her use. The new standard was hoisted at the palace to-day. It is 24 feet long and 12 feet deep and is equally divided, the British standard being on the left and the Danish standard on the right.

She will have a speed of 22 knots and will be twice the tonnage of the Kaiserin Auguste Victoria.

Thereupon the police prudently dispersed them.

HERE'S A MAN WHO WANTS THE MERGER

We want that merger with the New York, New Haven & Hartford road as quick as God will let us have it. I see that the chief objection in Massachusetts is the fear the New Haven road might run the State. Gentlemen, that idea is an insult to the old Bay State. I have enough confidence in her sons to know that they can frame laws that will control the most powerful monopoly.—Daniel C. Remick, former New Hampshire State Senator to Boston Chamber of Commerce.

NIGHT FLIGHTS BY SEARCHLIGHT

NASHVILLE, Tenn., June 23.—Charles K. Hamilton performed an unusual feat in his biplane last night at the military tournament, making two sensational flights with the aid of a searchlight as a pathfinder in the darkness. The night flying of the aviator excited the wonder and admiration of 20,000 people.

His perilous descent from the second flight alarmed all present. In midair a cylinder of his machine blew out and he was forced to land at once. The descent was made in a marsh between the race track and the fence on the backstretch, but was made without harm to man or machine. To-day Hamilton in his aeroplane will race for five miles with an automobile driven by Duncan R. Dorris. At the conclusion of this race he will be presented with a gold medal by the Nashville board of trade.

67 GRADUATES GIVEN DEGREES AT HOLY CROSS

WORCESTER, June 23.—Holy Cross College to-day sent out a graduating class of sixty-seven, the largest in its history. There was a large crowd at the commencement exercises, which took place on the college campus at 10 o'clock. Many alumni and friends of the college were present, and the diplomas were presented by Governor Draper.

For the first time in the history of the college commencements a solemn high mass of requiem was said in the chapel early to-day for the repose of the souls of the dead alumni. The officers of the mass were members of the class of 1885. The celebrant was Rev. Joseph F. O'Brien of Lowell, assisted by Rev. John J. Farrell of Clinton as deacon and Rev. William E. Foley of Hatfield as sub-deacon.

For half an hour before the commencement exercises there was a concert by Battery B Band. The exercises were opened with an address by Rev. Thomas E. Murphy, S. J., president of the college, with responses by Governor Draper, Mayor Logan of Worcester and Rt. Rev. Thomas D. Beaven, Bishop of Springfield. Besides conferring the degrees to the graduates honorary degrees were conferred upon eleven persons. Following the roll call of the graduating class orations by the honor students were made as follows: Salutatory, "Civilization of Modern Society," Lawrence F. O'Toole of Clinton; "Naturalism in Education," Daniel L. Donovan of Pawtucket; "State Paternalism," Cornelius J. Sullivan of Thompsonville, Ct.; "Social Evils and Their Remedies," Timothy F. O'Brien of Manchester, N. H.; valedictory, "Religion and Education," by James F. Connors of Pittsfield.

Among those present were George F. Lloyd of Boston of the class of 1850, the oldest living graduate of the college.

BOY DIES IN SAND AS MOTHER DIGS

METHUEN, June 23.—Summoned by the incoherent cries of her little son's playmates, Mrs. John Hague rushed to a sandbank where he had been playing and the top of which had caved in, burying him and two others. A neighbor, hurrying to her assistance, found the mother digging in the sand with her hands and offered her a shovel. By the time she had uncovered her son, John Hague, six years old, he was dead.

Edward Crowley, seven years old, and Gertrude Crowley, nine years old, narrowly escaped sharing his fate.

FEAR LOSS OF BIG GROUNDED LINER

ST. JOHNS, N. B., June 23.—The steamship Prinz Oskar, Montreal for Rotterdam with passengers and freight, which ran ashore on Flower [illegible], opposite Point Amour, is in a dangerous position and it is feared she will be a total loss.

Her passengers were taken off by the Allan liner Stalian, which then proceeded to England.

A revenue cruiser was dispatched to the assistance of the Prinz Oskar.

GREEK DROWNED IN LYNN POND

LYNN, June 23.—Consaine Papas, thirty, a Greek, whose home was at No. 154 Boston street, this city, was drowned while bathing in Flax Pond. His eighteen-year-old brother, who was on the shore at the time, became excited and was unable to render the older man any assistance. Papas was unable to swim and drowned when he stepped into deep water. The body was recovered by Chester Tarbox.

MISS MARION ORR, WHO IS REPORTED TO HAVE ELOPED

MARION P. ORR

FIREWORKS AT BASIN SURE

Following a conference with Mayor Fitzgerald, Acting Mayor Edward B. James of Cambridge and James P. Munroe, chairman of the executive committee in charge of the celebration, the Metropolitan Park Commission has allowed the display of fireworks in the Charles River basin on the night of July 4.

The commission completely reversed its attitude on the matter after having been assured that police protection would be afforded by the cities of Boston and Cambridge.

In a letter to Mr. Munroe, stating its attitude, the commission says that it still feels some apprehension as to the safety of the people who may be in boats in the basin since it cannot provide any police to patrol the waters.

The letter in part reads: "All who resort to the basin in boats at that time must do so at their own risk and be subject to the perils of navigation.

Mayor Fitzgerald stated that the police of Boston and Cambridge would look after the safety of the public. He said:

"I will appoint a committee of citizens to aid in seeing that the public safety is looked out for. We will provide boats for the protection of people who may meet with accidents on the river."

ROOSEVELT ASKS HUGHES TO CALL

NEW YORK, June 23.—Governor Hughes has accepted the invitation of Theodore Roosevelt to visit him at Sagamore Hill in the near future. When asked to-night at Albany concerning the former President's invitation the Governor said it had given him great pleasure to accept. He added that no date for the visit had been fixed.

Gifford Pinchot will be a guest at Sagamore Hill this evening. He made the announcement himself, but was dumb to all questions.

MARION ORR RUNAWAY BRIDE IN FAR WEST

Miss Marion Orr, who became well known in Boston last March, when she won a verdict of $41,000 against William Wood of Portland, Me., is to-day the bride of Frank J. Flanigan of No. 9 Burlington avenue, this city, according to a dispatch from Portland, Ore., where the marriage is said to have taken place.

The bride is the adopted daughter of Charles H. Orr, who formerly lived on Claxton street, Dorchester. Frank J. Flanigan until two months ago resided with his father in this city, and was, according to the directory, manager of the Excel Manufacturing Company at No. 19 High street. It is said that Flanigan followed Miss Orr and her parents to Oregon two months ago.

Miss Orr's suit was the culmination of an intimacy between herself and William Wood, who is a wealthy lumber dealer. A little girl, of which Miss Orr swore Wood was the father, figured prominently in the trial. Wood appealed the case, but a compromise was effected, by which Miss Orr is said to have received $25,000. The trial of the case was very sensational.

According to the news dispatch, Miss Orr intrusted the verdict money to her father for safe keeping. When Flanigan appeared as a suitor, an elopement was planned. Then Mr. Orr, it is said, was taken into the confidence of the lovers and agreed to the wedding.

NEW MYSTERY AT LAKE COMO

COMO, Italy, June 23.—"Let me die; let me die," was the plea made by a mysterious American woman to-day, when she was questioned by the police as to why she attempted to commit suicide in the local cemetery near the lake.

The police, with the one idea of solving the mysterious murder of Mary Castle Scott Charlton, whose body was found in a trunk in Lake Como, seize every opportunity of hunting for a clew to the tragedy. For that reason they attempted to gain some light on the movements of their present prisoner. Most of the time she was delirious, however, and they could gain no more than the bare fact that she insisted her name was Mary Raizerberg.

Her continued plea that the police cable to Leinburgen, Eighty-first street, New York, gave them no help, as she could not furnish the number. Though at first they believed the woman had been intoxicated, and for that reason the two shots which she fired at herself had missed, they finally reached the conclusion that the woman had been drugged.

ROOSEVELT TO HEAD PEACE COMMISSION

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Senator Lodge was authorized by the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations to report favorably the resolution adopted by the House for the appointment of a commission on "Universal Peace." According to statements made in the House, this commission was designed to afford opportunity for the activities of ex-President Roosevelt in the direction of promoting an understanding among nations looking to disarmament.

56-HOUR LAW HAS FIRST CONVICTION

NEW BEDFORD, June 23.—The first case under the fifty-six-hour law, which forbids a manufacturing or mercantile establishment to permit an employe to work at any other hours than the time stated in posted notices, resulted in the conviction of Richard G. Riley, superintendent of the Davol mill of Fall River, by a jury in the Superior Court.

Mr. Riley was fined $50 and appealed.

SENATE PASSES SAVINGS BANK BILL

WASHINGTON, June 23.—By a vote of 44 to 25 the Senate agreed to the House substitute for the postal saving bank bill. Two amendments offered by Senator Bristow of Kansas were rejected, and the bill was agreed to in the identical form in which it came from the House. The bill now goes to the President for signature. This practically clears the way for the adjournment of Congress Saturday.

KISSING TEACHER LOSES POSITION

NEW YORK, June 23.—On complaint of two pupils in a school in Wood Haven, of which he was principal, Edwin U. Chase has been discharged by the Board of Education.

The girls had complained that Principal Chase had kissed them against their will.

SEVEN ON TRIAL UNDER NEW INDICTMENTS IN GLOVER MURDER

ALTON F. TUPPER. MRS. GEORGE A. FREEMAN. SAMUEL D. ELMORE. MRS CLARENCE GLOVER. SEYMOUR GLOVER. MRS SEYMOUR GLOVER. GEORGE A. FREEMAN.

Widow, lawyers and beneficiaries indicted in Glover murder as accessories after the fact.

atmosphere of the courthouse, so that the ordinary number of spectators was increased every moment.

Elmore arrived in his big touring car. A moment later Mr. Tupper whirled up to the courthouse in his car.

Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Glover came in. At 9:45 Mrs. Lillian M. Glover arrived, in company with Mr. and Mrs. George A. Freeman. Mrs. Glover and the Freemans took seats on the spectators' benches in the rear of the court room. Mrs. Glover was in black, hat, waist, skirt and gloves. Mrs. Freeman wore a white straw hat, white shirtwaist and black skirt. Mrs. Glover was quite composed. Mrs. Freeman was apparently nervous.

Conference With Judge.

District-Attorney Higgins held brief consultation with Judge Stevens. Then events moved rapidly.

At 9:50 District-Attorney Higgins handed the secret indictment paper to Clerk of Court John L. Ambrose.

This move, coupled with the presence of Mrs. Glover, the Seymour Glovers, the Freemans and others in the court, was significant to the spectators. The news was whispered through the corridors. More and more spectators came in. The courtroom became jammed. The atmosphere, charged as it was with intensity of feeling, was also stifling from the heat and crowd.

Clerk Ambrose read in succession the name of every person indicted. The person named stepped to the bar in turn, until all seven were lined up before the court.

So far no accusation had been made, but the portent of the proceedings was plain. The line of seven men and women at the bar was watched from every angle of the courtroom with intense interest.

Mrs. Glover Shows Control.

Mrs. Lillian M. Glover held herself under admirable control. If she was worried or angered she gave no sign. Mrs. Freeman still seemed nervous, as she had appeared from the first.

Then Clerk Ambrose read the specific indictment, charging all seven defendants with being accessories after the fact. The language of the indictment reads that "knowingly the defendants did harbor, conceal, maintain and assist with intent that Hattie Le Blanc escape trial and punishment" for the alleged murder of Glover.

When the indictment words fell from Clerk Ambrose's lips and the mass of spectators knew exactly what was charged in this wholesale accusation there was a gasp of suppressed feeling from the people herded all about in chairs, on settees and over all available standing room.

Bail at $2,000 Each.

After each of the defendants had pleaded not guilty bail was fixed in each case at $2,000. District Attorney Higgins, who was conducting the proceedings in person, addressing the Court, said:

"I move that a jury be empanelled for the trial of these cases."

Judge Stevens ordered this done. Talesmen were called, and out of fourteen men examined twelve were found who were acceptable, and they took their places in the jury box. The jury is composed of the following men:

LEWIS F. EATON, leather, Newton.
ASTELL M. GAGE, leather, Somerville.
LEON W. GREEN, farmer, Melrose.
CHARLES E. HUNT, clerk, Somerville.
JOHN A. LANSING, retired, Cambridge.
JOHN W. McMILLAN, merchant, Melrose.
GEORGE W. LONGLEY, printer, Malden.
MOSES E. NICHOLS, retired, Reading.
DUDLEY L. PAGE, caterer, Lowell.
JOHN P. ROWE, grocer, Marlboro.
WILLIAM B. SAUL, salesman, Cambridge.
FRED WOODIEN, clerk, Lowell.

Dudley L. Page was chosen as foreman of the jury. Clerk Ambrose read the indictment to the jury. All the defendants were again arraigned before the bar. When they were seated General Bartlett made a motion that the jury be allowed to visit the scene of the crime. Judge Stevens said he thought this would be a good thing and a brief recess was taken to consider it.

By the time the recess had been declared the news of the bomb that District Attorney Higgins had exploded in the remarkable murder mystery had travelled throughout a large section of East Cambridge, and people hurried to the court room from all directions. It was soon filled to suffocation.

Visit to Glover Home.

It was agreed between District-Attorney Higgins and General Bartlett that it would be wise to take the jury at once to the Waltham home of the late Clarence F. Glover. A special electric car was chartered for this purpose.

It was planned to take the jury to the laundry where Glover and Hattie Le Blanc met by arrangement on the evening of November 20, last, and where he was fatally shot. From there the wounded man staggered to the private hospital of Dr. Nicholas W. Cousens, not far away, and died that night.

Hattie Le Blanc then left the laundry and went to the Glover home, and the Government contends that she was concealed there for three days and three nights by Mrs. Glover and her friends so that the police could not arrest her.

In the recent Glover will contest in the East Cambridge Probate Court it was charged that Mrs. Glover conspired with Hattie Le Blanc to kill her husband and get possession of the property that was willed to her. The will was allowed, however, the judge not finding that the evidence established the charges of the four Glover brothers who were not remembered in the will.

Mrs. Glover Goes Home.

Mrs. Glover went to Waltham, arriving at her home, No. 428 Main street, in the Beaver Brook section, at 11:30 o'clock. She made the trip by auto. With her were General artlett, ex-Mayor Daly and Messrs. Tupper and Elmore. As soon as they got to the house Mrs. Glover went to her room. The others all went into the back yard, where the lawyers conferred for some time. In another auto were Attorney Beatty of Elmore's office, and Inspector W. P. McKenna of the Waltham police.

The jury reached the Glover house in Waltham at 11:45 o'clock. The body was in charge of Deputy Sheriffs J. Edward Fairbairn and Eveleth and Court Officer Fred H. Rhoades. General Bartlett and Mr. Johnson were along. It was particularly noticeable that Mr. Johnson, who is senior counsel for Hattie Le Blanc, was in close touch with Mr. Higgins as the jury proceeded in its work of inspection. They seemed to be working together, and in many instances Mr. Johnson made suggestions which Mr. Higgins was quick to adopt.

Bartlett Speaks to Jury.

When they were looking at the house General Bartlett said to the jury:

"I want you to take notice that there are two families in this house. I also want you to remember that here is a lower piazza and a wide coping on the front of the building just above the windows of the apartment occupied by Mrs. Glover. There are also dormer windows on the third floor close to the coping."

The jury was taken to the rear of the Glover house. Mr. Higgins drew attention to the bars there that lead to Barton street, and he told the jury that that was the shortest route to the Waltham station.

The jury was taken to the estate of Christopher St. George which adjoins the Glover estate on the west. There is a large tool house there and the jury was asked to look at this. It is about nine feet high, twelve feet long and seven feet wide.

Then they went to the Glover dog house, in which it was hinted in the will contest that Hattie Le Blanc hid herself.

"I want you to notice that dog house," remarked Mr. Higgins, "and particularly its size."

Jury Looks Under Bed.

The doghouse is about three and a half feet long, three feet high and twenty inches wide. It has a small entrance. Going into the house the jury inspected all of the rooms and the bed under which Hattie Le Blanc was discovered late on the day of Glover's funeral.

The jurymen then climbed into their special cars and were whirled to the laundry where Glover was shot. It took them twenty minutes to look over that and from there they went to the private hospital of Dr. Cousens, where Glover died.

At 1:10 the jury started back to Cambridge. Arrangements had been made for the party to take luncheon at the Colonial Club in Cambridge.

Indictment Against the Seven Glover Defendants

Following is a copy of the indictment found against the seven new defendants in the Glover murder case by the Middlesex June Grand Jury, which was read to-day to the defendants in the East Cambridge Superior Criminal Court:

Commonwealth of Massachusetts, Middlesex, ss.

At the Superior Court, begun and holden at Cambridge within and for the County of Middlesex, on the first Monday of June in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and ten.

The jurors of the Commonwealthof Massachusetts on their oath present that Henrietta Le Blanc, otherwise known as Harriet Le Blanc, otherwise known as Hattie Le Blanc, on the twentieth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and nine, at Waltham, County of Middlesex aforesaid, did assault and beat Clarence F. Glover with attempt to murder him and by such assault and beating did murder said Clarence F. Glover.

And the jurors aforesaid of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts on their oath aforesaid further present:

That Lillian M. Glover, Samuel D. Elmore, Alton F. Tupper, George A Freeman, Frances I. Freeman, Seymour S. Glover and May M. Glover, on the twentieth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and nine, at Waltham, with force and arms then and there well knowing the said Henrietta Le Blanc, otherwise known as Harriet Le Blanc, otherwise known as Hattie Le Blanc, to have done and committed the felony and murder in manner and form aforesaid, the said Lillian F. Glover, Samuel D. Elmore, Alton F. Tupper, George A. Freeman, Frances I. Freeman, Seymour S. Glover and May M. Glover, then and there did knowingly harbor, conceal, maintain and assist with intent that said Henrietta Le Blanc, otherwise known as Harriet Le Blanc, otherwise known as Hattie Le Blanc, to then and there avoid and escape detention, arrest, trial and punishment; the said Lillian M. Glover, Samuel D. Elmore, Alton F. Tupper, George A. Freeman, Frances I. Freeman, Seymour S. Glover and May M. Glover, then and there not standing in the relation of husband or wife, parent or grandparent, child or grandchild, brother or sister by consanguinity, affinity or adoption to the said Henrietta Le Blanc, otherwise known as Harriet Le Blanc, otherwise known as Hattie Le Blanc, whereby, and by force of the statute made and provided, the said Lillian M. Glover, Samuel D. Elmore, Alton F. Tupper, George A. Freeman, Frances I. Freeman, Seymour S. Glover and Mary M. Glover are deemed accessories after the fact to the felony and murder aforesaid;

And so the jurors aforesaid do say and present that the said Lillian M. Glover, Samuel D. Elmore, Alton F. Tupper, George A. Freeman, Frances I. Freeman, Seymour S. Glover and May M. Glover at, Waltham aforesaid on the said twentieth day of November were accessories after the fact in manner and form aforesaid.

LINEMAN BURNS ON HIGH POLE

William E. Connolly, lineman in the West Roxbury district of the Edison Company, died early to-day at the Faulkner Hospital in Jamaica Plain from Burns which he received while investigating a short circuit trouble at the top of a twenty-five foot pole on Centre street, near Church street, West Roxbury.

Connolly had been sent out to discover where the short circuit was located. He was making his way down through the network of wires when, it is believed, he was overcome by the heat and dropped across a live wire. A loud report and a blinding flash followed. A fellow workman notified the powerhouse and the current was shut off while a man sounded a fire alarm.

Ladder 25 hurried to the scene and Captain McLaughlin lowered the unconscious Connolly to the ground with a rope. His flesh was burned to the bone on the back, shoulders and thighs. An ambulance was waiting and Connolly was hurried to the hospital. He died without regaining consciousness.

OFFICIALS SEE PIANO PLANT

The Hallet & Davis Piano Company has the wooden shell nearly completed for the five-story factory which it is to erect on the bank of the Neponset river, between Neponset avenue and Granite avenue. The factory is to be 300 by 80 feet, and will be the first of a group of six factory buildings which will have, when completed, a frontage of 980 feet on the river. The concret will be relieved by brick trimmings.

These piano factories will form the neucleus of a new community which is expected to spring up in the vicinity. Already plans for thirty dwellings are underway.

To-day Mayor Fitzgerald, Street Commissioner Gallivan, John C. Riley, the city real estate expert; Superintendent John A. Pettigrew of Public Parks, President E. W. Kimball of the Hallet & Davis corporation and Hollis French of the factory engineers inspected the ground to-day with a view to an outlet from the factory site to Minot street or to Granite avenue. The general opinion was that an extension of Highland avenue to the factory site was feasible. It would cost about $50,000, providing land owners would co-operate with the city on the prosposition.

COTTON FUTURES BILL IN THE HOUSE

WASHINGTON, June 23.—The Scott bill, making it unlawful for any person to enter into a contract for the purchase or sale for future delivery of cotton without intending that it shall be actually delivered or received, was brought up in the House to-day by the adoption of a special order reported by Representative Dalzell from the rules committee. The Scott bill was drawn to effectually stop gambling in cotton futures on the exchanges. The person sending a message either by telegraph or telephone must furnish an affidavit to the person transmitting the message that the sender is the owner of such cotton, and that it is to be delivered at the time specified in the message.

GEN. MILES GIVEN DEGREE OF D. D.

HAMILTON, N. Y., June 23.—General Nelson A. Miles, formerly in command of the United States Army, received the degree of LL. D. at the commencement exercises of Colgate University. General Miles delivered the Phi Beta Kappa oration.

WOMAN WINS BALLOON TITLE FOR ENGLAND

LONDON, June 23.—Mrs. Asheton Harbored to-day won the title of champion balloonist of England by traveling 115 miles in a race that started from Hurlingham. Mrs. Harbored covered thirty miles more than any of her opponents in the race, descending at Beccles. At times she rose to a height of 7,000 feet and when the balloon descended she was on the verge of collapse from cold, having to be assisted from the car.

Mrs. Harbored has won aerial flights before. She is known as a daring aeronaut and has crossed the channel six times in her own balloon. Her most recent crossing was made early in the present year when she went from Battersea to Hagen in Prussia. The English coast was left at Deal and the Belgian coast at a point near Ostend was sighted in six and a half hours after the start. The actual crossing of the English channel required three hours.

This exploit was preceded by a flight into France, where the woman aeronaut landed near Verdun. Mrs. Harbored has crossed the channel twice in one week, and her best time for the crossing is fifty-five minutes from coast to coast. She is the daughter of a surgeon-general in the British army and a daughter-in-law of Lord Suffield, who was one of the intimates of the late King Edward. Her husband is a member of a prominent English firm of bankers and brokers.

Her first husband was an Austrian merchant, who left her a fortune in her own right. Mrs. Harbored has competed in seven races. Her favorite pastime in the air is the balloon sport known as a hare and hounds race, in which a balloon is the hare and the others follow it, landing as near to it as possible.

THEATRICAL PARTY IN RIVER FATALITY

NEW YORK, June 22.—An actress known to the stage as Miss Marion Dell Taylor was drowned in the Hudson river, off One Hundred and Seventieth street, when a skiff in which she and three other theatrical associates were riding was smashed by a barge. Walter Farnum, one of the party, made an effort to save her, but the darkness prevented his locating her before she sank.

The others in the party were Arthur Seymour and Mrs. Gertrude Arden. They had all been connected with the "East Lynne" company, which recently ended a tour of the country here.

PUMP HANDLE TIED TO SUICIDE'S BODY

The harbor police recovered from the waters near T Wharf the body of a well-dressed man of about thirty-five years, who had committed suicide by jumping overboard. He had tied a heavy iron pump handle around his neck. He was about 5 feet 8 inches in height, weighing 155 pounds, dark complexion, smooth shaven, wearing a brown sack suit with a white shirt and turn-down collar. The body is at the North Grove Street Morgue.

THREE HELD FOR DEATH OF GIRL

CUMBERLAND, Md., June 23.—The body of Alice Brown, eighteen, was found with her throat cut in a clump of bushes here. Buck Nolan, also eighteen, with bloodstained hands and clothes and imprint of teeth on his arms, is in jail, charged with the murder, and Earl Mudge and Loring Barringer, both young men, are held as witnesses. Nolan was at the girl's home and he persuaded her to leave there. It is said he gave her a mixture of whisky and laudanum, which he has been in the habit of drinking.

COURT REFUSES TO ANNUL MARRIAGE

Judge Richardson refused to annul the marriage of Fred K. Weller to Ethel I. Mersereau, performed last August, when the husband and wife gave testimony in the case, which reached him on the former's petition. The husband had claimed that he had been forced into the ceremony by fraud and duress.

Mrs. Weller stated that they had met while attending a business college at Houlton, Me., in 1903, and that charges she had lodged against Weller had caused him to participate in a ceremony.

BOSTON GOES DRY ON COLUMBUS DAY

The naming of October 12 as a legal holiday, under the designation of Columbus Day, has called forth statements to the effect that the Licensing Board has decided to prohibit the sale of liquor in saloons of Boston on that day. It is possible that the licensing authorities in some places outside of Boston will try to take advantage of the looseness of the law to allow liquor selling on a legal holiday, but the courts might then have a chance to pass upon it, and they might hold otherwise.

200 ESTATE MEN TO TAKE AUTO TOUR

From present indications the forthcoming automobile trip of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange to Springfield, Worcester and Fitchburg and return on next Tuesday and Wednesday, will be fully as successful as all the affairs conducted by this association during the past year. Applications for reservations in the party are pouring in daily on President John J. Martin and Secretary Lewis, and it is now expected that about 200 will make the tour.

Though this trip was planned to enable some of the Boston real estate brokers and business men to see many improvements that are going on in the western part of the State, the primary object of the tour is to stir up interest among real estate brokers in the various places visited and to have them form real estate exchanges that will be affiliated with t ehMassachusetts Exchange. It is very probable that that will be affiliated with the Massachu- in Worcester, Springfield and Fitchburg.

Governor Draper will welcome the party at his Hopedale plant, and at Worcester Mayor James Logan, Charles T. Tatman, president of the board of trade, and H. N. Davison, its secretary, will head the welcoming committee. Thomas J. O'Connell of Worcester, and also a member of the Massachusetts Exchange, will welcome the party.

At Springfield the party will be tendered a banquet. Here they will be welcomed by Mayor Edward H. Lathrop, C. P. Chase, president of the Springfield Board of Trade; L. S. Brown, chairman of the committee of 100 of Springfield, and a big delegation of Springfield real estate and business men.

Wednesday morning will be spent in inspecting Springfield and vicinity, and then the party will tour to Fitchburg, where Mayor M. Fred O'Connell, H. E. Jennison, president of the Fitchburg Board of Trade, and Charles F. Wilson, its secretary, will do the honors.

Because of the increasing number of those now expressing their desire of participating in the tour, the committee in charge of the trip wishes all those who wish to go to send in their applications as soon as possible. On the New York trip many held back until the last day, and this resulted in some confusion and delay. For this reason the committee would like to know at once those who may have autos that are to join the party or those who wish reservations in the cars that have already been loaned to the exchange for this tour.

IF MUSICAL, YOUR EARS WILL SHOW IT, SAYS DR. O'MALLEY

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

When a person says enthusiastically, "Oh, how I love music. I could die listening to Paderewski," maybe he or she means it, or maybe not. Many a person who takes his seat at the opera with the same emotions that he experiences when getting into a dentist's chair will proclaim his love of music because he thinks it the proper thing.

And there used to be no way of classifying these musical pretenders. They were taken at their own valuation so long as they refrained from falling asleep during a symphony or talking at a performance of "Tristan and Isolde."

But now approaches Dr. Austin O'Malley of Philadelphia with an infallible method of telling a real from a phony musician. It is very simple: Observe the concha of the patient's ear.

Of course, it is necessary to know what is the concha, and the doctor explains very precisely just where and when the concha occurs.

Ah! Here's the Rub.

It seems that concha of people who know anything about music is large, deep and rectangular. Furthermore, and most important, the lower border must be horizontal and at right angle with the helix.

If anybody whose concha is vertical comes to you and says: "Honest to gracious, I do love to listen to that Mendelsohn strain," just look him in the eye and say: "Go to; it's the words, not the music of that song that you like."

"But where is the helix," you inquire excitedly. Ah, ha! That is where old Doctor O'Malley comes in. All you have to do is read his explanation, which for lucidity and clarity is remarkable, considering that it was lifted out of "American Medicine."

"It is commonly thought that persons who have the musical 'gift' have a peculiarity of the auditory tract, which distinguishes them from ordinary folk. There seems to be an actual physical quality in the hearing of musicians whereby they differentiate tones with subtlety, and this quality is congenital.

The Power of "Pitch."

"When two violins are supposed to be tuned in unison, yet absolutely are not, some musicians can recognize a difference in pitch of only one five-hundredth of a tone, and Landois, the physiologist, said a variance of one twelve-hundredth of a tone has been accurately appreciated.

"Certain musicians have the power of 'absolute pitch.' When any note is sounded on an instrument they can immediately tell by the sound alone what the note is. They can take down a melody, as if from dictation, and in its proper key.

"Mozart thus obtained the score of an unpublished 'Miserere' sung in the Sistine Chapel in the Vatican.

"What this peculiarity of the auditory tract is has not been determined. It is thought that the nervous structures of the cochlea, in the internal ear, are an organ of special sense for the perception of those regular alternate ratifications and condensations of the air that we call musical tones, and of those arrhythmic rarefications and condensations that are noises.

Explains in Detail.

"Beyond this opinion, still very doubtful, nothing is known concerning the special adaptability for the perception of music in the auditory tract. There is, however, a peculiar conformation of the external ear in musicians, first observed by Dr. J. J. Kinyoun of Washington, but never published, which is constant and readily perceptible. The external ear is called by anatomists the pinna (wing) or auricle. The outer border of the pinna is the helix. This begins in the crus (stock, leg) of the helix, just above the meatus, or canal leading into the eardrum, and ends in the lobule.

"Between the helix and the cupshaped depression, the concha, at the bottom of which is the meatus, there is a ridge, bifurcated above, called the anti-helix. That bifurcation is named the crura of the anti-helix, and the slight depression between these crura is the triangular fossa. The groove between the helix and the anti-helix is the scapha (boat, boat-shaped).

"The prominence at the inner edge of the concha is the tragus (tragus, a goat—because of the hair which grows upon that part of the ear in middle life); opposite and below the tragus is a prominence, the anti-tragus and between these points is the inter-tragic notch. Other depressions and prominences have special names, but these are unimportant here.

Musicians' Peculiar Ear.

"The shape of the concha (a shell) is the special phenomenon observable in musicians' ears. In these persons the concha is (1) large, (2) deep, (3) rectangular. The lowest border is horizontal, and at right angles with the helix, which makes the outer border of the concha.

"The fact that Apollo's ear shows such a configuration in the statue would seem to indicate one or two things: Either that a musician posed for the sculptor, or that the ancients recognized the peculiarity of the musician's ear and the sculptor endowed his Apollo with the musical sense.

"In singers," continues Dr. O'Malley, "even the noted artists, the lowest border of the concha is not seldom out of the horizontal line as this border goes back from the inter-tragic notch, thus forming a slightly obtuse angle with the anti-tragus (the ear of Mme. Emma Eames is an example, but this obtuse angle is found in the instrumentalists.

"When, on the contrary, the earlines are vertical, and the concha is narrow, with little or no border, and the lobule is large and pendant, the person, no matter how intelligent he may be, lacks the musical sense, is tone deaf. It is said that General Ulysses S. Grant was not interested in music, and he could not recognize old popular tunes. His ear lines were vertical.

"If a child has vertical ear lines it is useless to attempt to teach him music. One might as well try to make a pianist of a boy that has short, stubby fingers."

SENTENCED FOR ASSAULTING POLICE

Bernard R. Donnelly was sentenced in all to seven months in the House of Correction by Judge Williams in the Roxbury Police Court to-day on the charge of assaulting Patrolman Thomas F. McGrade of the Roxbury Crossing Station, attempting to rescue a prisoner and breaking glass in a saloon. Donnelly appealed on all three sentences and was held in $500. About two weeks ago the policeman arrested the brother of the prisoner, who is accused of beating the officer in an attempt at rescue. Donnelly is twenty-eight years old and lives in Jamaica Plain.

DISMISS PETITION AGAINST NICKERSON

The petition of Miss Bertha S. M. Hall, asking for an injunction restraining William A. Nickerson of No. 192 West Brookline street from annoying her was temporarily dismissed by Judge Fessenden today. Mr. Nickerson filed a stipulation with the court promising not to write any letters to or try and talk with Miss Hall before October 1, but asking that he be allowed, if he so desired, to bring a civil action against her. Miss Hall, when she filed her petition, said that Nickerson had been tracking her with detectives.

NEW TAX BILLS FOR N. Y. INTRODUCED

ALBANY, N. Y., June 23.—The first step to comply with the demand of Governor Hughes for more revenues for the State was taken to-day. The income of the State will likely be increased $4,000,000 annually if a progressive inheritance or transfer tax bill introduced in both houses becomes law. The bill proposes a tax based upon the amount of the transfer to the individual legatee, transferee or donee.

45,000,000 Storage Eggs.

NEW YORK, June 23.—Forty-five million eggs have been placed in cold storage in Newark, to remain until the high prices of last Winter are duplicated. The eggs have been shipped since April 1 and are mostly from Indiana, Michigan and Ohio. They were purchased at an average price of from 23½ to 24 cents a dozen.

Bump Restores Lost Mind.

NEW YORK, June 23.—Clarence Smith has been in St. John's Hospital, Brooklyn, for two weeks, his mind a perfect blank, unable to tell anything about himself or how he got there. To-day he got rambunctious, fought an attendant and in the scuffle whacked his head against a door. The bump restored his memory and he recalled being hit with a sandbag by highwaymen on June 11.

$11,000 Gems in Lard Pail.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—In an old, dust-covered lard pail hanging in the hayloft of a livery stable here $11,000 worth of diamonds were discovered by detectives. For nearly four months, while the police of every city in the country have been endeavoring to trace them, the jewels hung undisturbed in the barn where they had been hidden by Scott Winbish, a negro, who had stolen them from the home of Mrs. Rebecca B. Hornsby in this city.

YOUNGEST GIRL TO GET DIPLOMA FROM DEDHAM

ELIZABETH GRACE HALEY

GIRL, THIRTEEN, GETS DIPLOMA

Ninety-seven school children, the largest number in the history of the town, graduate from the grammar schools of Dedham to-day. Aside from this fact it was also important as being the graduating day of the three youngest school children who have thus far received diplomas from the town. The youngest graduate this year is Miss Elizabeth Grace Haley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Haley of Richards street. Miss Haley is thirteen years of age.

Miss Haley, who was born on June 18, 1897, has attended the Ames Grammar School, from which she graduates next Thursday.

Next in age as one of the youngest graduates is Bertha Day, who graduates from the Oakdale Grammar School. Miss Day will be the second youngest graduate of the town. She was born December 29, 1896.

Among the boys to graduate is Henry Fox, of the Avery Grammar School, the third youngest to graduate this year. Young Fox was born December 10, 1896.

The graduating exercises will take place in each of the schools separately. The diplomas will be presented by a member of the school committee of Dedham, who will be chosen later.

MAYOR IS URGED TO IMPROVE NEPONSET

F. C. Dowd, an attorney, has written to Mayor Fitzgerald, urging improvements at Tenean Beach, Neponset. He asks that the Civil Service Commission hasten to certify employes of the bath department so that the necessary number of attendants may be detailed at Tenean, leaving the swimming instructor free to attend to instruction exclusively. Other improvements which Mr. Dowd desires are more desirable dressing and locker room, abolition of the garbage depot on Tenean street, laying out of a pleasure park there and erection of a temporary footbridge over the railroad tracks at Pope's Hill so that beach patrons may not have to cross the tracks at grade.

ROUGH VOYAGE FOR MIDDIES

PLYMOUTH, Eng., June 23.—After a rough voayge across the Atlantic the American battleships Massachusetts, Indiana and Iowa, with 500 midshipmen from the Annapolis Naval Academy, arrived to-day. The middies are having their Summer practice. The squadron is commanded by Rear Admiral Clark.

The squadron sailed from Hampton Roads on June 9. The young men were given a taste of rough weather in what was for most of them their first trip across the Atlantic. One midshipman on the flagship Iowa suffered from an intermittent fever, and though he was practically convalescent upon his arrival here, he was removed to the naval hospital at Stonehouse in order that he might fully recuperate.

The local authorities are planning a round of entertainments for the visitors. The midshipmen will be guests at a dinner by the Lord Mayor of London.

WOMEN CELEBRATE MAYOR'S RELEASE

SALEM, June 23.—The acquittal of Mayor Arthur Howard by a jury in the Supreme Criminal Court on the charge of criminal libel in eight different counts set his Salem followers wild with delight, and prearranged demonstrations and impromptu receptions and flag-flying showed them in a holiday mood.

One of the finest tributes to the chief executive was made when nearly all of the 800 women who furnished the money at $1 each for his bail bond declined to take back the money and requested a share of the stock in the Mayor's paper.

BOSTON GIRL IS DENVER SUICIDE

DENVER, Col., June 23.—Lilla M. Burns, pretty and nineteen years of age, shot herself in the head in her room in an Arapahoe street boarding house. The bullet passed through her brain and she died a few hours later.

Upon a table at the side of her bed was a copy of a Denver paper, opened to the page describing the attempted suicide by shooting of Miss Harriet Brazier. The two were friends.

Miss Burns formerly lived in Somerville, Mass. Her mother lives in Boston, and among the effects in the room here is a postcard from the mother, dated Boston, but the address is not given. There also was found a picture cut from a Boston newspaper, entitled "Absence Makes the Heart Grow Fonder," portraying a mother holding a child in her arms. On the back of the picture is the following note, written by the suicide's mother:

"This reminds of old days when you used to love me so much. Not saying that you do not now, but the girl in the picture looks like you used to with your flaxen hair."

BROOKLINE WOMAN FRACTURES LIMB

While going from one room to another Mrs. Fogerty tripped, and as she fell her leg doubled under her. The injured woman was taken to the Carney Hospital.

DOUBLE LEGAL STAMPS MORNINGS

NEW MYSTERY IN THE DEACON WEDDING PLAN

LONDON, June 23.—The mystery surrounding the cancellation of the marriage ceremony which was to have united Miss Dorothy Deacon of Boston and Prince Ralbert Radziwill of Poland grew deeper to-day.

Among the many rumors current as to why the ceremony was abandoned with such suddeness after the guests were allowed to gather in St. Mary's Church is one that the Deacon family did not provide a marriage portion satisfactory to the Prince's family. But this was not generally credited. There were also rumors that the Princess Rad: will, the mother of the Prince, made her opposition to the match so effectual that the Russian authorities at St. Petersburg have not sent the necessary papers so that the church authorities could comply with the law and allow the marriage to take place.

There was another report of a reassuring nature. This asserted that the marriage would take place on Saturday with all difficulties smoothed away and that it would be before a small number of relatives and friends only.

Recall Deacon Shooting.

The Prince's family has opposed the match on account of the famous shooting affair at Cannes, France, when Mr. Deacon mortally wounded Emile Abeille, one of the most prominent men of fashion in Paris. The shooting took place in the apartments of the Deacons at Hotel Splendide. It has never been forgotten in the circles in which the Deacons, mother and daughters, have moved.

Opposition on the side of the Deacon family to the match was most heartily expressed by the wife of Admiral Baldwin, who is the grandmother of Miss Deacon. Mrs. Baldwin claimed that the Prince's family history revealed records of eccentricities which were alarming to all students of heredity. The Prince's father has been insane for seven years.

The abrupt postponement yesterday of the wedding of Miss Deacon and the Prince caused a sensation in society here and in Paris where the Deacon sisters are best known.

A large number of people had assembled at the church and a special staff of police was in attendance, but no bride or bridegroom appeared. Beyond the statement that the wedding wouldn't take place at that time, no information was forthcoming at the church.

Miss Deacon is not as well known in London as her sister Gladys, who is credited with having retired from English society in order to follow her own mode of life in Paris. Gladys caused a great sensation here and all social London is interested in the mysterious disappearance of a kink in her nose when beauty operations were not as general as they are now.

The bride-elect of Prince Radziwill is a very lovely girl and the young couple are desperately in love. The bridegroom-elect is only twenty-four years old, but is virtually the head of the Radziwill house, one of the wealthiest in Poland. The prince lives in Rome where the former Boston matron and her daughters have resided for years.

47 LUCKY NUMBER FOR NEWLYWEDS

NEW YORK, June 23.—"Forty-seven" seems to be the lucky number of John Rooney, a Brooklyn contractor, and his wife, who was Miss Sarah Justice.

They are forty-seven years old, were forty-seventh in the marriage license line, answered forty-seven questions, live at No. 47 Johnson street, expect to be married forty-seven years, and, Mr. Rooney says, hope to have forty-seven children.

BIG YACHT IS SOLD TO NEW YORK MAN

The D. B. Crowninshield Company announce to-day the sale of the schooner Crusader, owned by M. A. Cheney of Savannah, to William A. Drayton of New York. The boat is at present at East Gloucester. It will be fitted up and will start on an extended trip on July 10. The boat is 98 feet over all, 83 feet water line, 21 feet beam and 12 feet draft.

SEEKS HUSBAND GONE TWELVE YEARS

After searching in vain for seven years to locate her husband, who disappeared from his home in Fall River twelve years ago, Mrs. Emilia Mongrain of No. 216 Hope street has made a final appeal to the BOSTON AMERICAN to locate him.

Seven years ago Mrs. Mongrain heard from her husband in Washington, D. C., but since that time she has received no word. He has also been in West Superior and Ontario.

SALVATION ARMY WOMAN TO MARRY BOSTON LEADER

MISS FLORENCE ESTES

ARMY GIRL TO WED CAPTAIN

CONCORD, N. H., June 22.—The engagement has been announced here of Christian B. Hansen, who graduated last week at Boston University with the class of 1910, and Miss Florence Estes of this city. The bride-to-be has been connected with the local corps of the Salvation Army for a long time.

During the past few years she has been an officer in that organization and has been stationed at Boston and at several places in the West.

In this work she follows her mother, who has for many years been a leading worker in the Salvation Army. Several years ago the marriage of the mother to Roy L. Nutter, another local army leader, was one of the big events among the followers of the army.

Miss Estes is an accomplished musician, playing the piano, organ, cornet and guitar, as well as being a well-known local vocalist.

DESTITUTE WIFE SEEKS HUSBAND

With her three children, the youngest only five months old, in destitute circumstances, Mrs. Robert MacLachlan of Foxboro has appealed to the BOSTON AMERICAN to help find her husband.

Mr. MacLachlan left his home nearly a year ago. For a while he was employed in Boston as an iron worker. He is a member of the Boiler Makers' Union. Two weeks ago he was seen in Providence and said that he was coming back to Boston to work. Mrs. MacLachlan says that her children cry daily for their father, and unless he returns soon she will have to break up her little home.

SUFFRAGE ISSUE IN BRITISH CABINET

LONDON, June 23.—For the first time in the history of the British nation women and their aims received official recognition at a cabinet meeting to-day. A long discussion was held on the question of granting the plea of the suffragettes that government aid be granted for the second reading of the woman's suffrage conciliation bill. The fact that the anti-suffragettes oppose the bill is likely to result in the defeat, though the cabinet practically decided that the government would not oppose its passage.

TARBOX HELD FOR TRIAL ON BIGAMY CHARGE

WOONSOCKET, R. I., June 23.—Bernard L. Tarbox of Boston was arraigned last evening on a charge of bigamy and was held in $1,500 bail for the September term of the Grand Jury. He pleaded not guilty and waived examination. Judge Charles H. McFee of the Twelfth District Court ordered that he be held in $1,500 bail.

The bail was furnished by a security company. Mr. Tarbox then returned to Boston.

Mr. Tarbox, who a year ago married Miss Gertrude M. Devine, his stenographer, in Woonsocket, while he already had one wife, according to the charge, came here last evening and voluntarily faces the court. Chief of Police Lowell J. Boston of Woonsocket had had a warrant on the bigamy charge in his hands for nearly a year and served it last night.

Waives Warrant Reading.

Tarbox waived the reading of the warrant. Arrangements had already been made for the bail.

On June 3, 1909, Tarbox went to Woonsocket and was married to Gertrude M. Devine, aged nineteen, who had been employed as his stenographer. Tarbox at the time of this marriage had a wife living in Boston, and from whom he had not been divorced.

On June 3, 1909, the real Mrs. Tarbox, who had been Miss Blanche P. Matthews, daughter of the proprietor of the Shannon House in Bath, Me., went to Laconia, N. H., expecting her husband to follow in a few days. They had been married seven months. As soon as she received word of the elopement she returned to Newton, and her attorney, Walter A. Ladd of Boston, and William P. Devine, father of the stenographer, asked Chief Boston for a warrant for the arrest of Tarbox. A warrant was issued on June 18 and photographs and descriptions of the man were sent broadcast.

Went to Europe.

In the meantime dispatches were received from Utica, Rochester and other cities in northern New York that Tarbox had been there with Miss Devine and that the pair had registered as husband and wife. They also were in Canada, and from Canada they went to France and Germany.

LONGER HOURS FOR MODIFIED MILK

To meet the ever-increasing demand, the hours during which the new South Boston Modified Milk Station are open each day have been lengthened. The new station is in the Court House at Dorchester and Fourth streets. At first its hours were the same as those of the other stations under the direction of the Milk and Baby Hygiene Association, but its proximity to the out-patient department of the Carney Hospital showed that it should be kept open longer, and now a nurse will be found there on week days from 12 till 1 p. m.

SIXTY-YEAR-OLDS WALK 58 MILES

PORTSMOUTH, June 23.—Believing that walking is an incentive to good health, George W. Clark, sixty years old, and M. H. Brickett, sixty years old, both of Portland, walked from Portland to Portsmouth, a distance of fifty-eight miles. Clark is a trained nurse, while Brickett is a newsdealer. The walk was continuous except for lunch time. After looking over the sights here, the two will return on the electrics this afternoon.

ITHACA, June 22.—Announcement was made at the meeting of the Cornell alumni by President Schurman that the late Goldwin Smith had left the bulk of his estate to the university. It is believed the gift will amount to $1,000,000, which will be the largest individual bequest ever made to Cornell.

DARK OUTLOOK FOR AUTOS ON GLIDDEN TOUR

By J. C. KERRISON.

The officials in charge of the Glidden tour are, according to all accounts, having the usual experience with the drivers and operators, and likewise in the enforcement of the laws have already, on two cases at least, screened their decisions on penalties, and there are now one or two protests pending, which if determined in favor of the claimants will place two cars back in the clean-score ranks.

These two cars are the six-cylinder Premier and the Maxwell, both of which are now carrying penalizations, which, their drivers contend, are unfair and should not have been imposed.

Enough, however, has been heard of the run to make one conclusion that by the time it closes in Chicago a week hence there will not be a clean score car left in the running. The roads and conditions are the most ever experienced and instead of improving they seemingly get worse as the tour progresses.

No such tales of troubles and hardships as are being experienced on this run, have ever before emanated from the Glidden tour, and it is safe to say many years will elapse before they are duplicated.

Horace B. Lieser, vice president of the United States Motor Company, and factory Manager Knuckles of the Columbia Motor Vehicle Company arrived in town yesterday and spent considerable of their time in looking over the local field.

Vice-President De Lieser visited the gentlemen handling the various lines in the United Motor Company, including the Maxwell, the Columbia, Acoouard-Dayton and others.

Mr. Knuckles secured no end of information from J. H. MacAlman, the local representative of the Columbia.

Both gentlemen are enthusiastic over the present conditions of business and tell confidently that the coming year would be even a bigger business year than the one now being experienced, which is admittedly the most successful in the history of the industry.

They both felt that the majority of the manufacturers would have their new models on the market by the first of November. The Maxwell and Columbia will already by the first of August, and both will show thoroughness of design and construction.

In speaking about affairs in general, Mr. De Lieser said that it was fair to estimate that the product of the United States this year by all manufacturers would make a grand total of 181,000 automobiles, retailing at about $220,450,000.

The president of his company, Benjamin Briscoe, has prepared the following table:

Automobiles ranging in price from	No. of cars 1910	Retail-ing at
$ 0 to $750	16,000	$8,800,000
751 to 1,000	40,000	36,000,000
1,001 to 1,250	50,000	64,000,000
1,251 to 1,500	30,000	42,000,000
1,501 to 2,000	15,000	24,000,000
2,001 to 3,000	15,000	34,000,000
Over 3,000	15,000	52,000,000
Total	181,000	$220,450,000

Sales Manager Churchill of the Winton Motor Carriage Company was another one of the big guns who spent the day here. He is as thoroughly enthusiastic over the outlook as any man that has been here this season, and expressed himself as highly well pleased with the great work this year by Manager J. R. Winchip of the Boston branch.

The new model Winton will be ready for delivery the last of July or the first of August. Mr. Churchill said. "Winton efficiency will be retained in every particular, and the car will show some new refinements in matter of detail, which, however, are will be known in due season.

"I have no fear to say they will be in keeping in point of construction, finish, detail and appointment with any in the world."

SERVED 20 YEARS, IS AGAIN IN COURT

LYNN, June 23.—Fred Sturtevant, Fitzfred, who was the first man in the State to be sent to State Prison for twenty-five years under the habitual criminal act, and served twenty years there, being released on parole, was fined $50 in the Police Court on the charge of illegally selling liquor. The police claimed that Sturtevant sold intoxicants from a bottle he carried about with him. The prisoner conducted his own defence.

A Simple Cure for Hair Troubles

There are no better things known for treating the hair and scalp than Refined Soap, White of Eggs, Glycerin, Cochin Cocoanut Oil and Salicylic Acid. The soap cleanses the scalp of dirt. The Cocoanut Oil helps to make a lather and gives a beautiful gloss to the hair. The White of Eggs loosens dandruff and scales on the scalp. Glycerin soothes and heals the tissue and is emollient properties. Salicylic Acid is a destroyer of germs and bacteria and is an antiseptic that prevents disagreeable odors. Birt's Head Wash is made of all the above ingredients. It is a new scientific preparation that keeps the pores of the scalp open so the hair follicles can secure proper nourishment. MISS GAYNOR ELOPES WITH RICH CLUBMAN; MAYOR IS SURPRISED

NEW YORK, June 23.—While Mayor Gaynor was walking across Brooklyn bridge to his office under a blazing sun to-day a newly married couple were eating their first honeymoon breakfast at the Plaza Hotel. This was not extraordinary in itself, but the fact that the bride at breakfast was the eloping daughter of the Mayor made the coincidence one of more than ordinary interest.

The bride and bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kermit Vingut. Mrs. Vingut, the second daughter of Mr. Gaynor, is only nineteen years old, while the bridegroom is forty. The difference in their ages is understood to have been the cause of Mr. Gaynor's objection to the marriage, which took place at Wilmington, Del., late yesterday. Mrs. Vingut told a reporter to-day that she had not eloped.

"Didn't Run Away," Says Bride.

"It wasn't a runaway match," she asserted. "It was just a quiet wedding. I have always had a fear of big weddings ever since I can remember, a sort of stage fright. I would call it, and so we decided to slip away quietly down to Wilmington.

"Everything had been all arranged some time ago and my parents knew all about it. I had been engaged for about a year, but no definite date for the marriage had been set. A few days ago we decided to go to Wilmington to get married and we kept away quietly without telling anybody except my parents and a few friends."

The honeymoon suite was engaged by Mr. Vingut on Tuesday, when it is believed the elopement was planned. That the elopement plans were known to some of the friends of Mr. Vingut and the Mayor's daughter is apparent as flowers addressed to them began arriving at the hotel yesterday. When the bridal couple entered their suite there were flowers in every room.

Mayor Learns of Elopement.

Mayor Gaynor is believed to have first learned of the elopement while dining in Manhattan. He spent the night at his Brooklyn residence. Mrs. Gaynor and the Gaynor children have been living at the Gaynor Summer home, St. James, L. I., for a month or more. Miss Gaynor has been receiving devoted attentions from Mr. Vingut for the past two months.

The new son-in-law of Mayor Gaynor is of English-French descent and was born in New York March 12, 1876.

Vingut was graduated from Harvard with the class of '91. He is manager of a branch of the brokerage firm of Thomas J. Manson & Co. It is not in financial circles that he is noted, but as a horseman, clubman and society man. As a player he made a record several years ago, and had one of the finest strings of polo ponies in or around New York.

Groom in Canfield Raid.

When Richard Canfield's gambling house on East Forty-fourth street was raided in 1906 a number of young society men were said to have played for high stakes there, and Vingut was compelled to appear before the Grand Jury, where he told of playing for high stakes there.

Miss Edith Gaynor is the second of the Mayor's family to elope. The eldest son, Rufus W. Gaynor, eloped with Maria Giuffi, the daughter of a barber of New London, Ct., and they were married in Calengo. After the pair had lived together some time, young Gaynor discovered that she already had a husband living, and sued for an annulment of the marriage.

Mayor Much Surprised.

After Mrs. Vingut had denied that there had been anything in the nature of an elopement in her marriage, Mayor Gaynor issued a statement from the City Hall, in which he declared that the wedding had been a complete surprise to him. He also stated that he had not even known of the engagement of his daughter to Mr. Vingut. The Mayor said:

"Why, we never so much as suspected such an event. We did not even know of the engagement. My wife got a dispatch at St. James and I one in Brooklyn last evening from young Vingut saying they had been married and were on the way back. All they had to do was to let us know and we would have given them a fine wedding, but I suppose they wanted some romance. Young Mr. Stern, who went along with them, did the very same thing about a year ago and married a fine fellow."

BOSTON WOMAN IS A $1,000 DUPE

LONG BRANCH, N. J., June 23.—Claiming that she was duped out of $1,000 Miss. Grace Miller, a pretty Boston woman, revealed her story to the police and to-day Charles Hilton D. Walling is in New York with her levying to run down the swindlers, one of whom is believed to be a man posing as a "Count."

She says the men met her in Boston and induced her to come to Red Bank and put up $1,000 at a race track, promising her $5,000 to return. After giving the men the money here, the young woman, anxious to make more, gambled her jewelry to increase the stake. When she returned the swindlers had left.

WIFE'S DIVORCE STORY OF DRINK JARS SOCIETY

Society people of this city, Greenfield, York Harbor, Me., and Hempstead and Cedarhurst, L. I., today crowded the Suffolk Divorce Court, where Judge Richardson is hearing the divorce suit brought by Mrs. Cornelia Peabody King of Greenfield against Thomas White King, a wealthy New York broker.

Mrs. King, who is represented by former District Attorney Arthur D. Hill, charges her husband with intoxication and cruelty. She testified that her husband got very drunk while they were on their honeymoon, that he threw cups and dishes around rooms, and that he had threatened to shoot her.

Mrs. King, who is an attractive brunette of twenty-four years, asks for divorce, her maiden name and the custody of her two-year-old baby daughter, Cornelia Haven King. She also is seeking alimony. Because of the social prominence of the couple the case is attracting unusual attention and the courtroom was crowded today.

Mrs. King Is First Witness.

Mrs. King was the first witness called. She was calm and told her story in clear, even tones. She wore a black silk chiffon princess gown, a white silk drop skirt. Her hat was a black straw. The only jewelry she wore was a small string of pearls around her neck and a tiny silver ring on the little finger of her left hand. Her eyes are black and flashing. Her hair is black and her complexion a rich olive.

She testified she was married April 29, 1904, when she was seventeen. She and her husband had lived in New York, Long Island and mostly at Greenfield, this State. She declared that while she and her husband were spending their honeymoon in Paris he came home very drunk.

She said that in December of the same year, when they were living in New York, he came home very much intoxicated. She testified that Mr. King drank a great deal in 1905 and 1906. She told how, at a dinner party, he had drunk two or three Scotch whiskies and as many cocktails. She said that at a dinner party given by Mrs. J. E. Hadden in New York he was also very drunk. At a dance which Mrs. Hadden later gave she said her husband was so badly intoxicated that he could not go home.

Got Drunk at the Circus.

"He drank before and after we moved to Greenfield," she testified. "He was drunk at a circus party one night and he stumbled while going to the box and fell over backward. He was always under the influence of drink.

"He swore at me continually," she continued. "During the Vanderbilt cup races on Long Island in 1906, when we were at a hotel and I wanted him to go to bed so we could get up early, he drank whiskey and soda and pitched a pitcher. He threw cups and dishes around and he nearly always carried a pistol. Once he said to me: 'I will kill you and then kill myself,' but an end to you and me.' eW had a struggle for the revolver at the time and a woman rushed in to my rescue."

She told of another time when they were to have gone to a party. He was so much intoxicated, she said, that she had to drive him around for hours in an automobile until he grew sober. She said she left him June 19, 1909, taking her baby with her. They went to her father's home in New York.

"Since then," she said, "I have been constantly under a doctor's care for nervousness. I have lived in constant fear that my husband would kidnap my baby. He threatened to do this."

HOW TO RAISE GIRLS—The SUNDAY AMERICAN will tell how four extraordinary and beautiful girls were brought up.

HARVARD ALIVE WITH COLOR ON THE EVE OF THE GREAT CLASS DAY

Following the Harvard-Yale baseball game on Soldiers' Field this afternoon, interest at Harvard turns to the senior spread and dance to-night.

To-morrow is Class Day, the great annual occasion which, it is claimed, brings more pretty girls within the classic boundaries of Harvard Yard, than any other time.

During the morning hours to-day, long before the baseball game was to begin on Soldiers' Field, Harvard square and Harvard yard gave indications of the great Class Day event. The stores on the square were covered with banners and other decorations in crimson, or rather "arterial blood color," as the correct Harvard hue is styled.

The collegians took their time about getting out to-day, many of them having attended the Sanders Theatre concert the night before or having enjoyed sunday festivities incident to the glorious class-day week.

Seniors in Caps and Gowns.

But as the morning wore on the yard became lively with students passing to and fro, with capped and gowned seniors appearing occasionally.

Often there was the pleasant sight of a senior, very dignified in his cap and gown, escorting some admired and admiring girl with bold countenance his sister, more likely some other chap's sister. Anyhow, the girls all seemed to be highly attractive, and the collegians were exceedingly attentive.

Many visitors came over to Cambridge in taxicabs and these doughnut-wheeled vehicles were admitted to the yard roads. Meanwhile workmen erected canvas tents feet high about the yard, using the elaborate fencing to hang the canvas upon. Memorial Hall grounds was canvassed off in similar style.

Crush at the Spreads.

The senior spread and dance in Memorial promises its accustomed crush of youth and beauty. The delta surrounding the John Harvard statue outside of Memorial is to be used for box parties incidental to the dance. Japanese lanterns have been strung over the lawn and electric lights have been hung among the trees. These al fresco arrangements are conditional, of course, upon fair weather to-night.

Rush for Class Day Tickets.

Harvard grads have been fairly rioting for Class Day tickets. At the headquarters of the Alumni Association on State street there has been an all-day rush. No graduate is allowed to buy more than five tickets, and he has to be identified first. Following the ball game to-day there was another sale of Class Day tickets at the Delta of the '77 gate, near Harvard Square. The yard tickets admit to the yard alone. They are not given back to persons leaving the yard before 5 p. m.

The Memorial tickets admit to Memorial Hall and the gymnasium, but not to the yard. The yard will be open after 2 p. m. to-morrow to ticket holders only.

Two of the biggest spreads to-morrow will be that of the Hasty Pudding Club on Holyoke street at 12 noon, and the Beck Hall spread on the hall lawn after the Stadium exercises. The Lampoon editors will hold their reception from 1 to 3 p. m. in the new Lampoon building on Mt. Auburn street. The Pi Eta spread will be in the Hemenway Gymnasium from 4 to 6 p. m., followed by dancing. The Kappa Gamma Chi will "spread" behind Holworthy.

In case of rain the Stadium exercises tomorrow will be held in the new Lecture Hall, corner Kirkland and Oxford streets.

CITY PAYROLL SHOWS GROWTH

The annual payroll book containing the official list of all city employes came off the press to-day, and it shows that there are 13,664 employes of the city and county, or 442 more than at the same time last year. Each increase comes largely in the school, fire and police departments, over which the Mayor has no control. Three hundred and eight additional employes have been employed in the school department over the figures of last year. The police and fire departments have forty-nine additional employes, and the collecting department force is increased by eleven.

Twenty-three departments have increased the number of employes since last year, and ten departments show a decrease. The fact that "phony" ratings have been abolished is evidence that fewer political appointments are being made.

Since the publication of the annual payroll document the number of employes has varied each year as follows: 1905, 13,064; 1906, 12,499; 1907, 13,748; 1908, 13,674; 1909, 13,222; 1910, 13,664.

The EVENING AMERICAN guarantees to advertisers the largest circulation by far of any daily newspaper in Boston and over 200,000 more than the next highest evening paper, and over 75,000 more than all the other Boston evening papers combined. Circulation books open to all.

FOURTH'S MUSIC ON THE COMMON

All the preliminary arrangements have been completed for the outdoor concert on the Charles street side of Boston Common from 4:30 to 6 o'clock on the afternoon of July 4. The only thing that can prevent this concert from being a glorious feature of the "safe and sane" Fourth of July celebration is rain.

With fair weather many thousands will enjoy the popular patriotic program given jointly by an adult chorus of more than 200 voices rehearsed and directed by Mr. Osgood Chapman and the Children's choir of Theron Perkins's Boston band of thirty-five pieces, Theron Perkins conductor.

The singers will come from the People's Choral Union and the St. Cecelia Society of Boston, and from church choirs of Roxbury and Chelsea. They will be seated in an enormous stand on the Charles street side of the Common, and there will be room for a hundred thousand people to listen to the music.

ASH BARREL FIRE BURNS KITCHEN

Fire starting in an ash barrel at the rear of the New England Kitchen, on the second floor of the four-story brick building at No. 124 Milk street, early to-day caused a damage of about $140, and if it had not been for the timely discovery of the blaze by Patrolman Daniel Driscoll the entire plant would probably have been destroyed.

SHOWER BATH DELUGES BIG SIEGEL STORE

If there was one cool department store for the shopper to-day it must have been the Siegel store, which early in the day was treated to a delicious twenty-minute shower bath. The outside of the structure was given the same treatment which would have resulted had Niagara Falls been brought over to Boston for a moment and allowed to send its thousands of gallons of water crashing down the sides of the big building.

The bath came at 7 o'clock, being the semi-annual test of the water curtain system with which the building is fitted. Hundreds who were passing in nearby streets watched with envy the small boys who boldly dashed to the sides of the building and yelled with glee as the water poured down.

A Spray at Each Window.

Over each window of the big seven-story building a small jet fitted with a spray attachment is connected with the great water system which supplies the indoor sprinklers.

Were a fire to break out in any building near Siegel's it would be but a minute before every side of the department store would be enshrouded in a fire-defying curtain of water.

About 7 o'clock a. m. the water was turned on in the Harrison avenue extension side of the building. Men on the street watched the play of the water as it cascaded down the wall, and under the direction of superintendent H. F. Gamble noted any jets which failed to work. These will be repaired within the course of a few days.

The test was then made on the Essex street side, on the Washington street end on the Hayward place section. In all about fifty jets were found to have become corroded or for some reason out of commission.

All the Gutters Flushed.

In the test thousands of gallons of water were poured over the walls and windows, the gutters running almost curb high with the deluge. It would probably take a big corps of men many days to wash the outside of the 800 odd windows of the structure, but to-day they shone brightly and were rapidly dried by the early morning sun, not twenty minutes after the water was first turned loose.

The test was highly successful and demonstrated clearly that the famous Siegel building has nothing to fear from nearby fires and that no expense or trouble are spared to make the institution in every way as up to date as modern methods make possible.

RENO FIGHT MAD; JEFFRIES BEGINS HARD GRIND

GOVERNOR MAY BE AT RINGSIDE WHEN MEN MEET

By TAD.

RENO, Nevada, June 23.—Hats off, boys, to Governor Dickerson of Nevada.

He is a red-hot sport and will probably be at the ring side when Jeffries and Johnson start mingling. But that's getting ahead a little too fast. The Governor is not going to stop the battle. He has arrived from Oregon at Ely and a telegram sent him early to-day from this port brought back an immediate answer as follows:

"I shall not prevent the Jeffries-Johnson fight scheduled to take place on the Fourth of July at Reno, providing it is on the square, and I believe it will be so."

Somebody started a report here yesterday that the Governor would follow in the footsteps of the "Big Noise" in California and stop the fight here. For a few hours last night one could not help having a sneaking feeling.

Tex Rickard, however, refused to believe the report and was willing to bet a million against a cough drop that Jeffries and Johnson would mingle here on the Fourth. And Tex didn't get a single bet down at that.

Governor Invited to See Bout.

To-day it was said that Rickard and Gleason had invited the Governor to witness the battle, but as neither retired until after 3 o'clock this morning and left orders not to be disturbed, it was impossible to find out whether he would be with us on the glorious Fourth.

Sid Hester, the boy promoter, has the goat of Mr. Texerno Rickard for fair, and, believe me, Tex isn't afraid to talk about it, either.

It seems that Mr. Hester is attempting to stage a Ketchel-Langford fight here on the Fourth or the day before in an open air arena. Hester says that it's the fight of the century and will draw the limit at top prices. He has offered Ketchel $15,000 for his end and Langford the same, with a little cut on the side. At first he tried to get Rickard's arena to hold the bout in the morning, but Tex put his big stride down and now he threatens to build an arena of his own and hold the bout on the third of July.

Rickard Roasts the Other Battle.

Rickard is very much peeved. "It's one of those bunk Frisco fights, nothing more," said Tex, "and won't be worth looking at. They won't hold it in my arena, and if I can stop it they won't hold it on the same day. You know that if a man has $10, he is going to split it and see both fights if they're held on the same day, and I'm going to have a terrible job breaking even on the proposition I have.

"They can hold their fight after the big one in the same ring if they want to, or they can use our arena the next day, but as far as the morning of the Fourth is concerned all is off. The merchants and business men, besides those who have games here, won't stand for a morning fight. They want the crowd down town that morning. You see, they haven't long to stay on these special trains, and all the play they can give Reno will be more than welcome.

"The idea of matching Ketchel to fight on the Fourth of July is a joke. He hasn't trained a day in a month, and you can say for me that I'll bet $25,000 right now at odds of 3 to 1 that Langford is the winner."

Corbett Knocks Down Stranger.

Jim Jeffries, firmly established in his new quarters at Moana Springs, began to-day to put on the finishing touches for the big Fourth of July battle.

"I feel great," declared Jeff as he prepared for his first hike on a sage brush road, "and my friends do not need to worry a moment about my condition. The rest I have had during the past week is just what I need after my long siege of training, and I am now prepared to state on the final lap I am stronger and better than I ever was in my life."

Corbett engaged in an encounter with a drunken man at Moana Springs, protecting Jeff from the advances of the man, with whom Jeff had refused to shake hands.

Corbett stepped up, and the man started to use his arms. Corbett blocked the rush and with one blow knocked the man against a tree and cut open an eye. That stopped the incident.

Corbett was out bright and early to-day and declared he was ready to don the gloves with Jeffries at a moment's notice. "We have not been working very hard at training for a week or more, and I am expecting that Jim will begin to-day with lots of road work and sparring. He has had a good rest, and it will not hurt him a bit. Of course, the first thing will be to test his wind and discover how much adjustment it will need for the changed atmosphere."

A Little Bit Off the Top at Johnson's New Camp---By Tad

'ALTITUDE WILL NOT AFFECT ME' DECLARES JEFF

RENO, Nev., June 23.—Jim Jeffries is not worrying about the altitude. He says so himself. He talked over the situation to the newspaper men to-day, telling them he never felt better in his life.

"I wish to tell the people of Nevada, and of Reno in particular," said Jeff, "that I am glad the fight is going to be held in Reno. I can go ahead now, knowing that there is to be no further change in plans.

"I am in just as good condition as I ever was in my life, or better, and I can promise the people of Nevada that the white man's end of the battle of the century will be well taken care of on July 4.

"There has been some talk about the high altitude affecting me. I am not worrying about that. I have always been able to stand the altitude wherever I have been.

"I'm Fit for Battle."

"Just before I went into training at Ben Lomond I was in the mountains around the Tehacapi pass for some time, at an elevation of over 6,000 feet. I climbed mountains and did a lot of other work, but even then it never affected me. If it did not then, it is not going to now, after the careful training I have been through.

"Up here in Reno, where there is plenty of warm sunshine and good fishing, I expect to round into the best form I have ever been in."

Tom Flanagan busied himself to-day preparing for the negro champion's arrival Friday. Two boxing platforms are building beside the roadhouse picked out for Johnson's camp. One is to have a wooden floor, the other floor of tamped earth.

"Johnson won't have any complaints to make when he sees the camp I've picked for him," Flanagan said.

According to a letter received by Flanagan, Billy Delaney, veteran trainer, will not accompany Johnson to Reno and may not come till some time next week.

"I don't think anything is wrong," Flanagan said when asked for an explanation. "Delaney knows his business, and he probably figures that Jack won't need him for a few days."

it. He regained his composure in time to acknowledge a vociferous reception with his old-time smile.

Walter Kelley, the Virginian, dropped into the surging bunch of Renoites without attracting particular attention. They felt that he was too small for Jeffries and too well nourished for a trainer, so instead of cheering him the assembled Renoites kept whispering to one another, "Who is he?"

As Jeffries alighted from the car there was an uproar and a craning of necks, and some one said: "My, but he has taken off weight." But lo, it turned to be Jeff's brother Jack.

Stampede to the Big Fellow.

"He surely must come now," murmured some of the anxious ones, but while all eyes were focussed on the spot where the big fellow was expected to emerge Jeff went clear to the rear end of the train where the little green flag was fluttering, stepped down into the clear space uninterrupted. He was recognized, however, and the crowd stampeded toward him. He was surrounded and jostled as he made his way along, and Tex Rickard went to his relief and whisked him away in an automobile to the Hotel Golden, where Jeff made his temporary headquarters.

There was considerable confusion when Bob Armstrong suddenly loomed in the hotel lobby. The crowd mistook him for Jack Johnson, and some wonder was expressed that the two heavyweights should travel in the same train and register at the same hotel. Bob's embarrassment increased when Tex Rickard stepped toward him and said jokingly, "How are you Mr. Johnson?"

"You know very well if I was Johnson I would be accompanied by a fifteen karat yellow stone and a red automobile," answered Bob deprecatingly. But it was hard to make the assembled guests believe that Armstrong was not Johnson.

One old gray-bearded fellow, who looked like a relic of the roaring days of the Comstock, bent over Bob and whispered: "Do you think you will lick Jeff?" and Bob, who was slowly becoming a party to the deception, suddenly fell in line and yelled, "You bet, I'm going to try. I'll get him in the first round if I can." But this was only an incident of the day.

Enjoys Steaming Hot Bath.

When Jeff appeared again to take an automobile to Moana Springs, where he is to train, the crowd deserted Armstrong and pressed around the man from Burbank.

Rickard and Manager Sam Berger accompanied Jeffries to his training camp and when they returned an hour later Jeff said that he found the quarters suitable and would install himself there right away without delay. It was given out that Jeff would not work during the afternoon but would enjoy a steaming hot mineral water bath, something that would remind him of his old camp at Harbin.

The camp at Moana is now in full swing and is peopled by the same members of his family and training staff as were with him at Rowardennan.

Some of Jeffries' friends are wondering how the altitude of this place will affect him. Judging from what has happened before in such cases Jeffries will never be reminded that he is in a different altitude from the one he trained in.

Has Been Through the Mill.

One thing is certain, when he helped Jim Corbett at Carson City he did road work with the then champion every day and pulled and hauled in the Shaw's Springs handball court every afternoon, and no one ever heard him complain that the rarified air taxed his lungs.

In answer to a question asking where and when will the building of the new arena commence, Tex Rickard replied: "Work has started already. The ground is being surveyed and some of the lumber will be unloaded there this afternoon. The architect will supervise the building which will be constructed in accordance with plans made by him. It will be finished within eight days and will have capacity for 20,000 spectators."

The arena is being built three miles from the site of one of the Hart-Root fight a few years ago.

Sid Hester is talking of building an arena nearer Reno. He wants to put Sam Langford and Ketchell in the ring on the morning of July 4th, and Rickard does not like the idea.

Rickard Gets Peevish.

He says that it is his big attraction that will bring the crowd here, and he does not see why he should allow Hester to get the benefit of his efforts on the advertising the Fourth of July as a great pugilistic occasion. Moreover, Rickard says the citizens of Reno are providing the funds to build the new arena and do not wish to have all day fighting on the Fourth.

Hester claims that many of Reno's business men have urged him to bring Langford and Ketchel here. He says he will make another effort to induce Rickard to allow the middleweights to box in the Rickard arena in the morning, and if Rickard refuses to comply with the request he will build an arena of his own.

"It will come in handy," said Hester. "We may have Langford and Burns fight it out there on Labor Day."

LITTLE AGAIN MANAGER FOR JACK JOHNSON

SAN FRANCISCO, June 23.—Jack Johnson and George Little, his belligerent ex-manager, are once more reconciled and Little again assumes command of the colored champion's camp.

Their differences are settled and as a result there is considerable joy around the quarters. Details of the settlement are withheld as to the amount of the settlement, but it is said to be near the original sum of $41,000. Bert Schlessinger represented Little and W. E. Humphrey represented the colored champion. The conference resulted from the efforts of Alfred Meyerstein, who acted as arbitrator. A notary was summoned and made a transcript of the agreement.

Johnson has broken camp and this evening will hie himself to the training quarters secured by Tom Flanagan in the neighborhood of Reno. Jack has chartered a special car and will take the entire party which has been connected with the camp at the beach to Nevada. George Cotton and Dave Mills will be the sparring partners and Al Kaufman has been added to the staff, so that Johnson will have plenty of husky material on which to practice boxing and mauling around.

The train to which Johnson's special car will be attached is due to arrive in Reno Friday morning, and he says that he will do some road work in the afternoon as soon as he gets settled in his new abode. Betting on the outcome of the Jeffries-Johnson contest has experienced a fluctuation. The hope of the "white race" is a 10 to 6 favorite over Johnson.

RUMOR NEVADA GOVERNOR MAY HALT WORLD BATTLE

By C. E. VAN LOAN.

RENO, Nev., June 23.—There is persistent underground rumor that the Governor of Nevada, who up to now has not opened his mouth as to the publication of his views on the matter of holding the fight in his State, may make trouble for Rickard.

This Tex strenuously denies, but it is a significant fact that as yet the Governor has made no definite statement, and some of the pessimists are beginning to worry. In addition to this, it has been hinted that the fight would never take place, no explanation or reason going with the rumor.

"The Governor would not interfere," said Rickard. "I am as positive of that as I can possibly be. To show you how strong I am on this Governor proposition, I'll say this much. I am so sure that there will be no interference that if there is, the fight is off so far as I am concerned. I'll stand my loss and quit. I'm betting about $80,000 against nothing that the Governor of Nevada will not interfere. How can I go any stronger than that?"

"In order for the Governor to stop this fight," said a Reno attorney to-day, "it will be necessary, assuming now that he wishes to take such a step, to call a special session of the Legislature. Even if he should do this I doubt very much whether the Legislature would change the law.

Will Change Fight Law.

"The law may be changed after this fight. Very probably it will along with some divorce laws which have given this State unenviable notoriety, but there is no legal move which can be taken within ten days to stop the fight.

"In California it hung upon the question of the difference between a boxing match and a prize fight. In this State we have no such distinction and there is no limit placed on the number of rounds. I do not see how the Governor or anyone else could run counter to a State law which is as explicit as this one is."

James J. Jeffries, retired, undefeated heavyweight champion of the world, and now challenger for the honors which he lightly allowed to go by default, is in Reno. He was given a reception such as is accorded only to presidential candidates, crowned heads and champion prize fighters on his arrival here.

From Rowardennan to Reno the big fellow endured a three hundred-mile ovation, "endured" being the proper word to use in explanation of Jeffries's attitude toward the enthusiastic public.

An expert glad hander like James J. Corbett, who knows what limelight is for and appreciates it accordingly, would have made much of to-day's function, winding up a triumphal journey in a blaze of conversational sky rockets with perhaps an address of thanks to the citizens of the Sage Brush State.

Jeff Evades Crowds.

But Jeff is no Corbett when it comes to pleasing a crowd, consequently he robbed the worthy citizens of Reno in Concourse assembled of the inestimable privilege of seeing him disembark from his sleeping car this morning. When 5,000 men and women waited to see him the man of the hour slipped off the other end of the car, and was well on his way toward the Hotel Golden when a lynx-eyed snapshottist spotted him and set the pack in full cry. This callous disregard for the proprieties grieved Jim Corbett beyond all expression.

Reno is glad that it is going to get the fight. In order to show one of the principals that he is welcome here at least 5,000 people went to the depot this morning. Commercial Row, the street which fronts the Southern Pacific Station, was packed long before the whistle announced the arrival of the Overland train and the scene reminded one strongly of the railway station just before the arrival of a presidential candidate.

There was no brass band—how Reno came to overlook the brass band is a mystery, but the truth, however painful, must be told—and there were no little girls carrying flags and flowers, but the people were there, all sorts and conditions of them.

Greeted by Divorce Colony.

Even the visiting members of the divorce colony, twirling their pongee parasols, evidently quite regarded the affair in the light of a pleasant break in a monotonous existence.

Tex Rickard, who no longer jumps when any one speaks to him, worked his way out to the track, where he was interviewed and reinterviewed, but said nothing whatever but that the Governor of Nevada would not interfere.

Prominent sporting men from all over the country exchanged greetings, the Goldfield men, disappointed but game to the last, accompanied Tex, cameras were unlimbered and there was a general surge toward the Pullmans when the big black engine came to a halt.

Bob Armstrong was the first celebrity in sight. Realizing that it was a gala occasion, Robert wore a bright purple shirt and a tan-colored derby hat, and when the crowd yelled "Johnson," Bob showed his glistening ivories, and remarked:

"Not guilty, gentlemen, not guilty."

Jim Corbett, neat and natty in a gray traveling suits, modestly acknowledged the cheer with which he was greeted. Jim was once a champion himself, but now that he is present only as a sort of an advisory board, he plays the part of second leading man with the troupe as if born to the position.

Spot Jeff, Rush Car.

Mrs. Rickard, a very pretty young woman, in a gray traveling suit and Persian turban, greeted Mrs. Jeffries when she appeared, and Jack Jeffries, because of his likeness to his brother, drew a tentative cheer from the crowd. Then came a long, painful wait.

"Wise old fox," said the newspapermen. "He'll appear just at the last minute and get a terrific hand. Wonder who stage-managed this part of the show?"

The suspense continued—no Jeffries. Five thousand people were watching the wrong end of the car for a brown man with a cauliflower ear. That was why nobody saw Jeffries slip out of the way. Someone recognized his big soft hat, and in ten seconds there was a rush from all sides, and Jeffries was surrounded, slapped on the back and prodden on the ribs and otherwise made to feel at home.

"Let's get out of this," said Jeff to Rickard, and the two men broke through the jam and walked rapidly to the hotel, where another big crowd was waiting. Perhaps they expected that Jeff would say something or do something to entertain them. They were mistaken in the man.

Jeffries hopped into the elevator with Rickard and went aloft for a conference and the few hundred men who were jammed into the hotel lobby poured out into the street again undoubtedly feeling that they had been defrauded out of a sensation.

With the arrival of one of the fighters, interest in the battle flames afresh. Before to-day it had been a thing distant, far away, a matter of newspaper columns and gossip. The presence of Jim Jeffries in the town brought the matter down to a personal basis, and everywhere men began to talk of the fight.

"How does he look to you?" was the question. Of course opinions conflicted.

KIRKWOOD HIGH GUN AT PALEFACE SHOOT

WELLINGTON, June 23.—Horace Kirkwood, one of the best all-round amateur shots in New England, and always a dangerous man in the interstate handicaps, showed himself in his old-time form over the traps of the Paleface Association, beating the thermometer when he registered a score of ninety-eight kills out of the 100 targets comprising the match. Charles Marden of Salem was second high, ten birds behind the Wollaston gun.

The added target handicap match afforded a lot of rivalry and Charles of Newton proved the winner by virtue of his big handicap of twenty targets added to his actual score of eighty-six. Kirkwood shooting from scratch was second, with ninety-eight to his credit.

HARVARD PLANS TO GET BACK AT YALE IN TO-DAY'S GAME

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

NAVY BOXER MEETS NORTH END RIVAL AT AMERICAN A. C.

HARVARD 'VARSITY CREW GO FOUR-MILE COURSE AGAINST TIME TO-DAY

HARVARD TRAINING QUARTERS, Red Top, Ct., June 23.—To-day Captains Waid and Woodel of the Harvard and Yale varsity eights respectively and F. Valentine Chappell of Yale, chairman of the regatta committee, confer on the final arrangements for the laying out of the flags marking the course.

Another conference of the Harvard rowing committee is on. Robert F. Herrick, chairman of the committee, and George Mumford arrived to-day and were in the Harvard launch with Dr. Ladd when the varsity crew rowed down stream. They had a fine view to see the work of the Eli eights, but expressed no opinion on what they saw after they returned to the boathouse.

All the Harvard crews are now regarded picked, but Coach Wray wants to get in one more time row for them. He will send the crews over the long course against time this evening.

An extremely close and exciting two-mile race between the varsity four-oars, which the first won by a bare length, brought out the form of the two crews. During the last half-mile of the contest the two crews changed their respective positions no less than five times.

The first nosed ahead at the finish by a magnificent spurt, displaying superior reserve power. The time for the distance was 12m. 11⅘s. At the mile mark the second boat was one-quarter of a length ahead, having led from the start. The time for this distance was 5m. 55s.

Neither crew rowed below 35 at any time. At the start and at the finish the strokes approximated 38. The second rowed slightly higher for the first half-mile. Both fours displayed fairly smooth form. Toward the end of the contest Sargent and Balch in the varsity boat and Wiggins and Smith in the second weakened perceptibly.

NO MORE DISTANCE ROWS FOR ELI CREWS SAYS COACH KENNEDY

YALE TRAINING QUARTERS, Gales Ferry, Ct., June 23.—"There will be no more long distance rowing by any of the Yale crews," said Coach Kennedy to-day.

"All the oarsmen are in fine condition and it would be folly to work them hard while the temperature is so high. The crews are rowing satisfactorily, and it is now only a question of keeping them in good condition until they pull their respective races."

Colburn still retains his seat at No. 2, vacated by Tucker on account of malaria, and as the date for the big race draws nearer Tucker's chances for returning to the varsity boat grow very slim.

This afternoon Yale's squad will go down to Red Top in launches and pay their rivals their "annual call."

Arrangements are being made for the first races between Yale and Harvard, which take place next Wednesday, the day before the big struggle. Heretofore these races have been held, a gentlemen's eight, second varsity and freshman four oars, but the second varsity four scrap is reported to be shelved, Harvard claiming the crew at Broadview having "squealed."

The race between the graduate oarsmen, or gentlemen's eight, is one of the most interesting events of the season, as the Andrew Gates trophy goes temporarily to the victor.

CORNELL MANAGER ARRANGES RACE BY SUBSTITUTE FOURS

POUGHKEEPSIE, June 23.—The race for the substitute four in training here for the varsity college crews is assured by Manager McCormick of the Cornell squad.

For the past few days he and Assistant Manager "Abe" Lincoln have been busy getting the other crews' promise to enter a four. For a while this plan did not meet the approval of all, but finally Syracuse, Pennsylvania and probably Columbia have consented to enter one four, while the Cornell boys will enter two.

When one of the Quaker fours were out one of the men in the substitute fours caught a crab. The oar snapped short and the wash box was smashed. H. P. Smith lost his head and in scrambling around put his foot through the shell. The four men yelled to the coach that they could make the boathouse, which they did.

PAY $7,000 FOR MINOR LEAGUER

President Herrmann announced that he had purchased Pitcher Benton, a sensational young southpaw, from the Macon Club of the South Atlantic League, and paid $7,000 for him.

Several major league clubs, including the Pirates, Giants, Cleveland, Washington, St. Louis Nationals and Boston Americans, were bidding for the star hurler.

Against South Atlantic batters he is invincible. Besides having terrific speed and fine control, he has a sharp-breaking curve. He's a six-footer, weighing 180 pounds, and gives promise of having a successful big league career.

"You can say for me," said Mr. Herrmann in discussing the purchase, "that we paid the largest price for Benton ever paid for a Class D player. No less than seven major league clubs were after him, but we went the limit in order to strengthen the Reds in the box."

NILES WINS TENNIS TITLE FROM SEAVER

"Nat" Niles won the championship of Massachusetts in tennis singles by defeating R. Chauncey Seaver, the former five-time holder of the title, in the challenge match by the score of 6—3, 6—0, 6—3.

MEANIX CHOSEN TO LEAD TRACK TEAM

William H. Meanix of Jamaica Plain has been chosen captain of the Boston English High track team for next Winter.

"HI HEN" IN THE GAME.

"Hi Hen" Labelle, at one time leading slabster for the New England League when he pitched for Concord, and who has pitched for Lynn, has given up the game as a means of a living, now holding down a responsible position in a Lynn shoe factory. He is anxious, however, to keep in his hand and is open to engagements for Saturdays and holiday games. He can be reached at his home, No. 22 Ashton place, Lynn. He is both a heavy hitting outfielder and a star twirler and is assured of plenty of work this Summer.

HAMILTONS WANT A GAME.

The Hamiltons of Lynn, one of the fastest semi-professional teams in the State are looking for a few guarantee games to fill in open dates for the Summer. Manager Kelliher has games with Fitchburg, Marlboro, Fisherville, Clinton, all fast teams. The Hamiltons want their games out-of-town. Address Manager Kelliher, No. 16 Minot street, Lynn.

POLICE RIVALS CLASH TO-DAY ON DIAMOND

The first game in the series for the station championship of the Boston Police Department takes place to-day when the nine representing the East Dedham Street Station crosses bats with the blue coats from the North End district at the Locust street grounds, South Boston.

The eyes of the entire police force are centred upon this game. The teams are old rivals and a victory means much to either. Several former major and minor league stars are included in the batting order.

Both teams have been practicing for a week and the players are in fine fettle. Each of the eighteen policemen who are to-day setting aside the nightstick for the willow are imbued with the one idea of capturing the initial contest, which in the past has always gone a long ways toward deciding the championship. They figure that by landing the opening game they will also garner the opposing team's angora, to remain with them for the rest of the season.

Lieutenant Michael Crowley, who is managing the team from the Tenderloin district, says he can't see anything to it and that the "huskies" from his division will answer roll call to-night with a figure one jotted down in their games won column.

Joe Battis of the Hanover street aggregation, however, declares "Smiling Mike" is away off in his reckoning and that before the game is over the South End guardians of the peace will think they have been flirting with a half dozen and three meteors.

BOSTON GIRL WINS MATCH

PHILADELPHIA, June 23.—Close and hard fought matches rounded out the most successful day's play of the week in the women's national championship lawn tennis tournament at the Philadelphia Cricket Club.

Miss Hazel Hotchkiss, the national champion, made her first appearance of the week in tournament play when she and Miss Rotch defeated Miss Moyes and Miss Green, in the second round of the women's doubles.

QUINCY TENNIS CLUB TO HOLD BIG TOURNEY

The annual open doubles tournament of the Quincy tennis club will be held on the four cinder courts of the club beginning on Saturday, July 2, and continuing on Monday, July 4. If the weather prevents starting play on Saturday the first matches will be called on Monday.

The club offers a handsome pair of cups to become the property of the winners. The winners this year will also become the holders for one year of the Quincy challenge cups for doubles, the third pair of which will be put in competition this year for the first time.

JOCKEY HUPPE IN HOSPITAL DYING

NEW YORK, June 23.—The jockey, E. Huppe, who was crushed under Goldplate, his mount at the steeplechase at Sheepshead yesterday, is dying to-day in the hospital. The doctors say there is not a single chance that the jockey will recover. It was during the second circuit that Goldplate, well up with the leaders, pitched, throwing Huppe to the ground, where the horse fell over him.

MAGNER CORNELL BASEBALL CAPTAIN

ITHACA, N. Y., June 23.—E. B. Magner, for two years shortstop on the Cornell baseball team, has been elected captain for the 1911 team.

GOLF GOSSIP CLUB NOTES

By playing a round of 71 in the play-off for the open United States golf title against his younger brother, Macdonald, and J. J. McDermott, Alex Smith of Wykagyl showed what he can do when he is pressed. Alex had his chance of winning the highest honors a golfer can win in this country when he had an 18-inch putt for the title on the last green of the fourth round, but he missed it. To finally win out after having passed up this one golden opportunity is only a furtherance of another of Alex's creeds, "the Lord was with me."

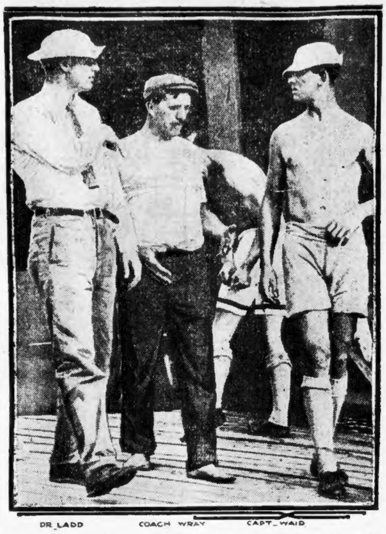

Somehow or other Gilbert Nichols is always a near winner in a great many matches and tourneys when titles are involved. His golf is of the highest calibre and he is sure to come into his own before very long.

One of the many mixed foursome tourneys that have become so popular this year will be held to-day at Chestnut Hill. Chestnut Hill puts a premium on straight driving on this course, but who minds hunting for a ball along shady lanes a little off the course in a mixed foursome event. In fact it may prove an inducement to some of the players to get a little off the line.

Those who expect to try to qualify at Oakley next Saturday must send in their entries before Friday night. It don't cost anything to enter.

The 200 men and women who gathered behind the ropes that kept the gallery away from the finalists in the State championship at Brae-Burn last week showed that they were real golfers and were more interested in how finalists play than in trying to play themselves. There were several business men who would not have another chance to golf until the following half holiday, yet they preferred to walk eighteen holes, following this match, than trying to win some cup at their home club.

If the Red Sox can beat the Senators again to-day it will be four straight games, which is going some, even against a second division club, and every fan in Boston is confident that the speedy bunch will tack on another win. The series only stands now, Red Sox 9, Senators 2. These figures do not show the relative strength of the two teams, as the Senators have made the Red Sox hustle in every game and are not down and out by any means, even if they have been walloped into a lop-sided state.

While the McAleer team may squeeze through a win this afternoon in the fourth setup, there is no expectation of such a happening and will only come about as a victory being long overdue for them.

Manager Donovan has all the best of it in the twirling line, as Hall and Arellanes are still to be heard from, and they are just ripe to do some heavy hurling that will put any team to come up in front of them on the run.

Altogether it looks like the Red Sox would climb up very close to those Highlanders and nail them for third place before many games are played between the Eastern clubs.

The Doves will make one more desperate attempt to prevent being buried deeper in the cellar position and show the way to the Phillies at least once in the series before it comes to a close. Four straight defeats is a bad record, and a change for the better is needed.

NOT BIG ENOUGH TO PLAY; DUFFY WAS DISCHARGED

Hughey Duffy was one of the players on "Pop" Anson's old Chicago team in 1889. Most of Anson's players were giants. Duffy was about the only midget on the nine. Players were not farmed out to minors in those days. They were not "placed" and their salaries guaranteed as is done to-day. When a player was "let out," so to speak, he was actually jobless.

Well, one day late in the season of 1889, Anson made up his mind that he didn't want Duffy. Just about this time the air was charged with rumors of a revolt of the players and the formation of the Brotherhood League, but the National League magnates didn't believe them. Neither did "Pop" Anson. He could see nothing in baseball but the old league.

Anson said to Duffy: "Hughey, you are a pretty fair ball player, but you are about twelve inches too short and about one hundred pounds too light for my team. So I am going to give you your release. I am sorry, but I must have larger men."

Duffy's eyes glistened, but not with tears. He reached in an inside pocket and pulled out a bulky document stamped with a red seal and tied with a big blue ribbon.

"Read that, 'Pop,'" said Duffy.

Anson read—read and gasped. The "document" was Duffy's signed and sealed contract to play with the Boston team of the Brotherhood League in 1890 at a salary of $4,000. He had been getting $2,000 in Chicago.

Jump Back to Old League.

Duffy had an experience of a different kind the next season. The Brotherhood began to totter in mid-Summer and the players began flocking back to the fold of the organization they had deserted the year before. Duffy and McCarthy received an offer from the Boston Nationals, but scorned it, and named salaries far in advance of those offered by President Soden—at which they agreed to sign their contracts for 1891.

'Round and 'round went the hands of the clock, and faster and faster did the associates of Duffy and McCarthy desert the sinking Brotherhood barge and climb aboard the indestructible National League liner.

Duffy and McCarthy became somewhat alarmed. They were ready to climb aboard the big ship on the captain's terms, but they didn't want to appeal direct to Mate Soden.

Let a Boston newspaper man tell the rest of the story.

"Duffy and McCarthy told me they were ready to sign, and so I went to Soden," he says.

"Why don't you get those two men before some other club snaps 'em up?" I asked.

"'I'm willing,' said Soden, 'but they must sign at my terms.'

"'I'll bet you a $50 suit of clothes I can get them to sign your contracts,' I said.

"'Make it two $50 suits,' said Soden.

"'All right,' I said. 'Let me take those two contracts.'

"Soden handed them over, and in an hour I brought them back with the names of Duffy and McCarthy properly affixed. Soden was overjoyed and gleefully handed me the order for the two suits."

Is Double-jointed Player.

Rolla Zeider, the new second baseman of the White Sox, is the possessor of a pair of wonderfully constructed double-jointed ankles.

"He can turn them completely over, so that his feet are at right angles to his limbs," says the team's trainer, "and all I need to do is to straighten them out and he is ready to play again. When he gets through playing ball he can make a good living in a museum of living anatomy."

"Who of all the batters you have ever faced hit the ball the hardest to the outfield?" was the question an old-time fan asked of Duffy, and then the fan added: "Of course it was either 'Bill' Lange or 'Larry' Lajoie."

"No," replied Duffy, after reflection, "it was, to my way of thinking, a man born and raised in Cleveland. There never was, never will be and isn't now a more natural batter than was Ed Delehanty. When you took a line drive from his bat you took chances of going to the hospital with a broken hand.

"Were it possible to measure the speed of a batted ball from the time it leaves the bat until it hits the fielder's glove or the ground or the fence I wouldn't be surprised if a ball from the only Del's bat would be found to hold all records for speed.

COLLEGE MEN OF COUNTRY IN FAST SWIMMING RACES

Fifty-four entries have already been received for the first set of [illegible] championships of the Intercollegiate Swimming Association, to be held at Travers Island, New York, Saturday, under the auspices of the New York Athletic Club. [illegible] the privilege to make post-entries has been granted, there is reason to believe that the total number will pass the [illegible] mark.

No national aquatic [illegible] ever filled so splendidly. It promises to be one of the best in the history of American swimming.

Of the four events on the program only three carry with them intercollegiate titles—the 440-yard and one-mile swim and the high fancy diving. The other event, 100-yard sprint, is open only to those students who have never been placed in a championship race.

Eight Universities Entered.

Of the twelve colleges invited to the meet, eight have signified their intention of sending teams: Columbia, City College, Yale, Pennsylvania, Princeton, Cornell, Williams and Amherst, but it is hoped that the other four—Harvard, Brown, Annapolis and West Point—will decide to be represented. New York alone will give thirty-two starters, there being fifteen entries from Columbia, and seventeen from the City College.

Distance swimming and high diving are new ventures for college men, and there is no telling how the 'varsity stars will make out at them.

In the 100-yard event Howe of Yale is favorite, with Gosnell and Cross of Princeton and Jameson of Williams next in line. But there may be surprises sp[illegible] Columbia [illegible] Stewart, [illegible] and Marsh [illegible] College of the City of New York [illegible] will have to be taken into the reckoning.

At fancy diving there is nothing who will prove best. [illegible] Stoddard of Yale [illegible] Parke and Platt of [illegible] of Williams, Patterson of [illegible] and Ragow of the College of the City of New York are the likeliest candidates for the place.

Great Field in Quarter-Mile Race

The quarter-mile championship should be one of the best races ever seen. If practice times may be taken as a guide, the men will have a neck-to-neck struggle from start to finish. Among the starters [illegible] Captain Richards of Yale and [illegible], the present 220-yard champion, [illegible] Pennsylvania, the 100-yard [illegible] Brown [illegible] placed in several national championships last season, Bertrand and Mackey of Columbia, House, Grant, [illegible] baum, Stern and Robertson of the College of the City of New York and Eyre of Williams [illegible] exceptionally fast.

In the mile race will be seen some well known [illegible] Hyde, who will swim for Yale, was among the first three to finish in the [illegible] Marathon of 1908, [illegible] of Pennsylvania [illegible] took second last year in both the half and mile Middle Atlantic championships, forcing the winners to new records; Brown of Princeton, placed in the races for the national title at both these distances. Others who will start are McGregor of Yale, McLenahan of Princeton, Agramonte, Norton, Bertrand, Mackey, Webber and Clark of Columbia, and Nussbaum, Robertson, Grant, Stern and [illegible] of the City of New York.

The races will be contested over 100 and 110 yard courses across the Travers Island Creek from the New York A. C. [illegible]

EASTERN LEAGUE GAMES ILLEGAL

NEW YORK, June 23.—Four Eastern league baseball games have been declared illegal by P. T. Powers, president of the league, who thus sustains the protest of the Toronto club that Shortstop McMillan, formerly of the Brooklyn National league club and now with Cincinnati, had no right to play in them. The games must [be] played off on the same grounds on which they were first played.

They are Montreal at Rochester, June 4, and Rochester at Toronto, June 6, 7 and 8. Montreal won, and in the Toronto series Rochester won two and Toronto one.

President Powers finds that McMillan was still a member of the Brooklyn team when Cincinnati made application for his services, on publication of Brooklyn's intention to release him, and that therefore, he had no right to sign with Rochester. On assur[ance] from President Ebbetts of the Brooklyn club, however, that waivers from all other National League clubs would be forthcoming, Rochester paid $1,[illegible] for him and signed him.

McMillan played four games for Rochester and was protested by Toronto. On receipt of the protest President Powers inquired of President Lynch of the National League for the facts and was informed by him that Cincinnati still claimed McMillan.

FIGHT GOSSIP IN FRISCO TOWN

Billy McCarney says: "I'm betting that Jeffries scores a knockdown in the second round. They have posts all over town [illegible] on that thing. You have to pick the winner, the round he wins in and the round the first knockdown occurs in. I pick Jeffries to win in the eleventh."

Tim McGrath, the man who handled Tom Sharkey in both his big fights with Jeffries, [illegible] the winner of the big fight [illegible] he says, he has not seen Jeffries [illegible] himself yet. "It will [illegible] long fight," says Tom. "Jeffries is [illegible] you know; he isn't a rusher. [illegible] Tom Sharkey did all the fighting in New York [illegible] second go, and, believe me, [illegible] should have won. If Jeffries wants to beat this fellow he'll have to go [illegible]. The longer it goes the better it will be for Johnson. I know them both well. I've been behind Johnson in six of his fights and know his style well."

"Jeffries never met as dangerous a fellow as this Johnson," said Spider Kelly. "The [illegible] were all pretty well in [illegible] got them, but in Johnson he [illegible] who is as big, just as strong [illegible] and dangerous anyway you take [illegible]."

There's another rumor around town that Spider Kelly and McGrath will help Johnson on the 4th of July.

Dewitt Vancourt, who was boxing instructor here at the Olympic Club some years ago, thinks that Jeffries will out[illegible] Johnson in this fight. "Jeffries is [illegible]" said Vancourt [illegible] "and I wouldn't be a bit surprised to see him make the colored fellow look like a wooden Indian."

"I see that Bob Armstrong is a great Jeffries rooter now," said a fan at the Cliff House to-day. "Say, when that fellow worked with Johnson for the Ketchel fight he said that there wasn't a man in the world who could muss Arthur's hair. Now I see that he picks Jeffries to win in six rounds. Money in sight does change people's ideas. No kid."

Wilson Mizner was being shaved in the St. Francis when the news was broken to him. The barber asked, "Shall I cut your hair, sir?" "No, cut my throat," chirped Mizner. He hadn't been in town an hour when the bad news came to [illegible].

Ketchel is around town full of smiles, making things merry. He does not think that there's a chance to stop the big mill and will go into training just as soon as his match with Langford is made.

Mizner says that [illegible] thing is on the level and that fight [illegible] for that [illegible] and Steve will [illegible] immediately and get [illegible] (Twin) Sullivan for Milwaukee or Philadelphia for the Fourth of July date.

STRAIGHT TIPS FOR SPORT FANS

THREE MORE RECRUITS OF THAT speed bunch the Roxbury Sporting Club, have gone out for diamond honors in leagues outside of Boston. Big Fred Ostergren, the [illegible] hitting first baseman [illegible] up in Pearville High Schools for a long time, has packed his Saratoga and pushed off for Middleburg, N. Y., where he will [illegible] home runs, triples and doubles this Summer. Next Monday Leo Callahan, one of the best left-hand school pitchers yet developed around the Hub, cuts loose with "Bill" O'Connell, an old Dorchester High "pal," for Schoharie, also up in the Adirondack country. These three lads form the younger vanguard of the Roxbury Sporting Club phalanx of coming stars under "Bob" Fuige's able tuition—the big three now out being "Tom" Madden of the Boston Red Sox; "Bla" Cooney, the lightning fast shortfielder now burning 'em up for Lowell of the little old New England League, and last, but not least, clever Otto Deininger, a "crackerjack" outfielder. Other star kids of the Highland Club of athletes are "Jimmy" Mulvey, a bird of a third bagman, "Huck" Lyons, "Steve" Reddington, "Jack" Barrett and a bunch more.

"SO KETCHEL IS TO FIGHT LANGford at Reno," chirped Ed Papke, manager of his brother, the Illinois Thunderbolt. "Well, that does not surprise me any. That match was all cooked before Ketchel fought the black man at Philadelphia several months ago. I know for a fact that there was an agreement between the manager of Ketchel and Langford's director that there should be two fights, one in the East and the other in the West. Ketchel would not have fought Langford at Philadelphia if he hadn't been guaranteed that he would not be knocked out."

From the above it is easy to see that the Quaker fans got a nice trimming when they went to see the Langford-Ketchel bout.

JUST BECAUSE SOME PEOPLE CAN'T sleep in Southbridge while a boxing match is on, the see-lectmen have stopped boxing in that busy little town. Seems to me that if a boxing match would keep the see-lectmen awake down there it would [be] a blessing. Then some of those pious guys might be induced to keep their mitts out of the savings bank cash drawers. Guess you're barking up the wrong tree, Mr. See lectman.

GOVERNOR OF NEVADA SAYS HE won't interfere with the big fight. That's what Gillett of California said before he turned his double somersault. But, then, maybe they have more regard for their word of honor over in the divorce factory State.

OLD DOCTOR CORBETT HAS SPRUNG the first new one. He's going to "fix up" Jeffries by putting mud under his eyes to keep out the reflection from the canvas mat. I'm a Jeff man, but when they begin to doctor up the "old hoss" I begin to get nervous. I like the pacers that race without hopples.

NAVY BOXER VS. NORTH END LAD

The American Athletic Club swings in to-night with its usual good boxing show. While there are no champions on the bill, the card is made up of the most promising boys among the local fraternity and for that reason the fans seem to be taking an extraordinary interest in the outcome.

The match that seems to have the call to-night is the one between Don Vincent, who scored so successfully at the navy tournament, and Tony Lorenzo, the new comer in the 116 division. This match has had the North Enders on edge for a long time.

The other bouts to-night are between Teddy Murphy of the West End, and Eddie Fitzgerald of the South End, Tom Goodman of the South End, and Jimmy Lyons of the market district, and the final event, George Alger of Cambridge, and Pat Rocco of Haverhill. The Alger-Rocco bout will be eight rounds, as will the Vincent-Lorenzo mill.

The North End organization has a building well adapted for Summer meetings and the chances are that one of the biggest crowds ever seen at the new club will be on hand to see to-night's show.

LOCKWOOD PLAYS OFF TIE WITH ANDERSON

At the Allston G. C. this afternoon A. G. Lockwood and J. G. Anderson will play off the tie for the gross prize of the club's open amateur meeting of June 3 and 4. The match will start at 3.30.

Both of the State amateur ex-champions made 73 for a gross score. Anderson scoring 37—36—73 and Lockwood 36—37—73. A close match is looked for.

The competitions for the Spring and consolation handicap cups has reached the finals, which will be between A. S. Clark and F. I. Jaquith and T. A. Ashley and J. H. Baldwin respectively.

In the semi-finals for the Spring cup, A. S. Clark beat C. W. Parker, Jr., 5 and 4 and F. I. Jaquith beat S. R. Dunham 3 and 2. T. A. Ashley won his semi-final match from F. E. Belden in 7 and 6 and J. H. Baldwin defeated W. C. Hagar, 1 up.

JIM MORAN TO MEET COLLINS

There will be a clash at the Revere bike track next Saturday night when Jimmy Moran meets Elmer Collins of Lynn in a motor paced race of fifteen miles. Moran wants to beat his young rival the worst way as the Lynn fans have been saying things about Jimmy's record, while Collins has come in for a lot of praise.

Besides the paced event there will be battles between the professional sprinters in the grand circuit bill which was postponed from last Saturday.

There promises to be an interesting struggle for the championship this year. Early in the season it looked as if Frank Kramer would have a walkover, but of late he has been defeated and Joe Fogler is fast crawling up on Kramer. Kramer now has 25 points in the championship table while Fogler is a good second with 18.

The circuit chasers ride in the quarter-mile national championship and a two-mile handicap.

JOE FOGLER PRESSES KRAMER FOR TITLE

The defeats administered to Champion Frank Kramer are making the National circuit championship interesting. It was at the New Haven track that Kramer got his first setback and it was given by Fred Hill.

Of late Joe Fogler has been showing rare form and he is fast overhauling Kramer. Fogler now has 18 points against 25 for the champion.

Last night the men rode at the Vailsburg track and to-night they get busy in the five-mile championship at New Haven. Friday night will find the circuit chasers riding at Providence, after which they come to Revere for the postponed quarter-mile championship and two-mile handicap events, postponed from last Saturday night.

Umpire Klem no longer uses a whisk broom to clean up the plate. He carries a curry comb and grooms the platter when it gets soiled.

Mike Konnick, farmed by the Reds to Buffalo, is out of it for a while as the result of a soak from a pitched ball.

Hughey Duffy now tips the Highlanders for pennant winners. Yes—if Ford, Vaughn and Quinn hold the pace.

Comiskey frankly admits that he could not get any player worth while out of the American League in exchange for Bill Burns, so he let the Reds have him.

* * *

Drucke, the young Giant pitcher, has a brother catching in the Texas league. The one who has already broken into fast company touts his brother as a sure comer if he ever gets the chance.

* * *

Tony Smith, who has crowded Tiny McMillan off the Brooklyn team, has [illegible] come back in great shape. He didn't look specially good when he was with Washington two years ago.

* * *

Big Injun Meyers catches like a King when working with Mathewson, and is an awful wart when paired with the other Giant hurlers. Sort of a Sioux one day and a Plate the next, as it were.

Russel Ford, sensational pitcher for the Yankees, is a clever cartoonist, and he also writes verses.

Zack Wheat, the Indian outfielder of the Brooklyns, says he is a Cherokee and not as usually supposed from his Kansas origin, a Potawatomi.

McGraw is shrewd [illegible] general [illegible] his use of Snodgrass and Devore. He [illegible] the best in against left handers, and Snodgrass simply beats them to death. When right handers are working Josh is on the job, and is one of the best run-getters in the league.

The season is two months old and Cincinnati fans haven't seen the world champions in action. To restore harmony, 'tis said Manager Clarke will sell First Baseman Jack Flynn.

A prominent business man of Detroit recently offered to bet the whole works that the Browns would cop the pennant. His relatives have had him placed in the dippy-hatch, and hopes are entertained of his recovery.

Hughie Jennings isn't infallible in his judgment of ball players. He's the man who asked for waivers on Catcher Jimmy Archer a few seasons ago.

Fred Clarke must be suffering from a bad case of rattles. Wholesale shake-ups and general switching of players from their rightful positions never won championships.

TORONTO FIGHT BID PROVES TO BE HOAX

TORONTO, Ont., June 23.—Downey and Horshall characterized as a hoax the telegram making an offer of $150,000 for the Jeffries-Johnson fight, said to have been received by Tex Rickard. No such message has been sent by them, Mr. Horshall said.

NO YANKEE OARSMEN FOR HENLEY

Horse and Speedway Notes

While [illegible] trainers have been rather [illegible] overdoing things with [illegible] during the past few days, [illegible] to get them a bit used to [illegible] there have been a few [illegible].

* * *

J. Y. [illegible] was out behind the $10,000 [illegible] Gay Audubon, by Audubon Boy, 1.59¼, the [illegible] season's track record for three-year-old trotters to 2.18. The colt was worked in company with the bay gelding Major Wellington. After going several warming-up miles they started out to [illegible] the three-quarter [illegible] Gay Audubon threw [illegible] break. In the [illegible] the colt trotted like a [illegible] the mile being in 2.18.

* * *

Krill, George Leonard's good three-year-old trotter, has been a mile for Henry Titer in 2.10½. Titer has been going easy with this chap for the past few weeks, but will commence to put the question to him in earnest before long.

* * *

Trainer Lon McDonald wrote to a fellow trainer, who has considerable interest in the way that the futurity colts are working, that there are in training at Indianapolis three three-year-olds that should be able to trot in 2.10 at Detroit. This has set the owners of futurity candidates to thinking.

* * *

Hugh Milam's three-year-old colt by Directum Miller, out of the great brood mare, Regent's Last, has been a mile in 2.21½ over the Johnson Farm track.

* * *

George Norton's Allitewood gelding, The Mason, is making speed fast. Henry Titer drove him a nice easy mile in 2.21 the other morning.

* * *

George Leavitt expects to make a trip to Fredericton, N. B., for the purpose of taking in the races that open there June 30. One reason for his going is that the green pacing mare Mary Cromwell, by Gambetter Wilkes, which he purchased in Kentucky last Fall and afterwards sold to Fredericton parties, is to make her first start there. Trainer Bouteillier, in whose stable the mare is, writes Mr. Leavitt that she has been a mile over a half-mile track in 2.18, and could have paced the distance in 2.14.

* * *

D. W. Caton's two-year-old colt Cochato Boy, by Cochato, 2.11¼, has been a mile in 2.32 over the Hillsgrove half-mile track.

* * *

Both parties to the much talked about match between the two Readville trotters Alondra and Bronson say that they are ready to put up their money. The present hitch appears to be over the acceptance of a stake holder. Both George W. Leavitt and Dr. Dow have signified their willingness to serve. Either would be acceptable to both parties, but owing to the fear that the appointment of one would wound the feelings of the other it is probable that some one less well known will be agreed upon.

* * *

Trainer John Morgan, who has a number of excellent prospects in his stable at Readville, will have an addition to his stable in the trotter William J., half-mile track record 2.21.

The Disillusionment of the Honeymoon

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

No. 4.—THE SIXTEENTH DAY.

"H[illegible] have you [illegible] as Green and in [illegible]"

"[illegible] Why [illegible] noticed it?"

"[illegible] anything [illegible] putting [illegible] down with a bang. "It's a [illegible] have it open [illegible] everything open."

"[illegible] Warren. It can't be very [illegible] June."

"[illegible] Well, it can be cold [illegible] shore. And the way you [illegible] draughts is around me. I tell you [illegible] draughts. I never [illegible] to live comfortably together [illegible] to learn to consider my wel[illegible] little."

"Why, Warren!" In a hurt voice. "You know I want to do that! I suppose I just didn't think about the windows."

"Well, it seems to me you've had [illegible] coming through here ever [illegible] If you've been raised [illegible] I have."

There was a silence of several [illegible] as he strode restlessly around the [illegible].

"What shall we do to-day?" He took [illegible] his watch. "It's only ten o'clock. [illegible] got to get through the day some [illegible]."

The Spat Over the Time Table

The feeling of responsibility—of it something her fault that the time dragged [illegible] upon them—came over her now. [illegible] in the last few days [illegible] of last night [illegible] of something they could [illegible] something that would [illegible] would break the monotony [illegible] to be growing upon them.

"Sha[illegible] Clifton?" she asked. "[illegible] You know we haven't been [illegible] yet. It's only about fifteen miles [illegible] here."

"Well, [illegible] at the rest of these [illegible] villages it's deadly dull. But I suppose we might as well go there as mope [illegible] here. Where's the time table?"

[illegible] among the papers on [illegible]

[illegible] first train goes [illegible] one around 11.

[illegible] West Ridge, Clifton [illegible] Why there isn't [illegible]

Here, give [illegible] knew a woman who could [illegible] a time table.

"But here it is, [illegible] trains."

He took it from her and frowned over it for a second.

[illegible] Now we'll have to hurry [illegible]

"But [illegible] I didn't see that."

"Of course not; you were looking at the Sunday schedule."

On the train he became at once absorbed in his paper and left her to gaze out of the window.

Why Was It Like This?

As she watched the flying fields and [illegible] and telegraph poles, her mind was filled with the same [illegible] thought that had obsessed her for the last few days. Why was their honeymoon like this? Why was it so different from her dreams? Why did the hours hang so heavily upon them?

When only a few weeks ago they had so much to say to each other, why [illegible] did they seem to have nothing to [illegible]? Why did she find herself constantly straining to make conversation?

What was it that had said: "The [illegible] of marriage instead of binding only [illegible] love."

Was this true? Because they were [illegible] tied [illegible] because he [illegible] her, because he was now secure [illegible] was that [illegible] of his lessening interest?

Already he was growing careless of his appearance when [illegible] were alone. Last evening he sat [illegible] an hour without his coat, because [illegible] said he was warm and tired. And the afternoon before, he had come in from a long walk, thrown himself on the [illegible] kicked off his shoes and lay there for some time before troubling to put on his slippers.

Were all the little niceties of courtesy and personal appearance to be lost because they were married?

DEMAND FOR HELLO GIRLS

TELEPHONES, says the United States Department of Labor and Commerce furnish employment for almost as many women as any other business in the country. The growth of the system throughout the country has opened more and more opportunities for girls who live at home and who wish to earn from $5 to $10 a week. The business has become so great that it ranks among "the chief occupations for women, and everywhere ranks close to saleswomen and stenographers as a field of work for women." The great majority of the girls are daughters of American-born parents and are of a high average of intelligence. The prospects are that within the next decade there will be more girls employed by the telephone companies than work as stenographers and typists.

The Human Passions ❧ Love ❧ By Nell Brinkley

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner.

"Love makes girls and boys sail from the shore of the Sure and Known, pushed out by an irresponsible dare-devil Cupid"

[illegible]est-learned paragraph in all the little book of the human passions—even it comes gayly out of little kid's soft, pink mouths, and it puzzles and holds a little maid's eye the most of all her lessons, till suddenly the letters of it turn gold and blind her eyes, and she stumbles up and goes out bravely and blindly, gayly and scornfully, as lovers have a fashion of doing, goes in the "insolence of youth"—goes—whither?

Love is the bravest thing in the wide world. It makes girls and boys sail from the shore where the end of all things Sure and Known is, in a painted egg-shell, pushed out by an irresponsible, dare-devil baby, with a blinded figurehead, the wind blowing and flowing out of the great light place where the black water and the sky kiss, telling them what lies there in a language they can't understand, a smile curling their lips, tight in one another's arms, their eyes wide and bright on the deep sea ahead, and Love with the wind he can't understand either, whistling in his hair, shoves out, and the first white water whispers "Whither!" at the bows.

A Rule for Success That Didn't Work

By KENNETT HARRIS

His theory was that when a man got deeply in debt he would hustle and work to get out again, and that credit would be the making of him.

By KENNETT HARRIS

WHEN [illegible] looking [illegible] had pressed [illegible] good and departed [illegible] the row sitting on the sidewalk edge and Solomon Baker hitched over to make room for him.

"[illegible] has got to get [illegible] more of them [illegible] by the way [illegible] at him," observed Baker.

"He certainly has," agreed the storekeeper. [illegible] business [illegible] exceptin' where [illegible] accommodate a good [illegible] afford to carry [illegible] better prospects [illegible] Dave [illegible] pay [illegible] got [illegible] money [illegible] ought to [illegible] keep along [illegible]

[illegible] fact," said Washington Hancock, pausing a moment in his whittling. "[illegible] ought to [illegible] him have what he [illegible] Rufe."

"Why?" asked the storekeeper.

Levi Hollerday's Way

"So he'd work to get money to pay for it," explained Hancock. "The way it is he'll go over to Jim Thompson's an' Jim'll stake him to what grub and terbacker he needs. Then he'll go back home an' loaf until the [illegible] runs to scrapings again.

"I remember [illegible] feller name of Levi Hollerday, that was something like Dave. I don't say [illegible] shiftless as Dave is, but he was [illegible] easy an' he liked to fish when the wind got around to the south. But when he did work, it didn't do him no particular good. He wasn't no better off at the end of the year than he was at the [illegible], seemed like. He kept a roof over his head an' food inside his family an' some sort of clo'es on their outsides, but if he wanted a drink of likker, he'd have to trade aigs for it. He didn't never have no cash money after he got his regular groceries paid for.

"Well, one day he was comin' to [illegible] he heard Judge [illegible] didn't [illegible] Judge [illegible] pretty poor stock [illegible] about [illegible] other things [illegible] the probate judge office ought to be run an' he had a big bay winder an' a voice 'at would carry five mile on a still day, so there was a heap o' folks thought he was a smart man. The Judge he allowed that a feller never amounted to shucks afore he run into debt.

"'You put a feller in a hole, an' he'll wiggle to beat the Dutch to get outen it,' says he. 'It stands to reason. Same way, you get a man in debt an' he'll hustle to [illegible]. What's more [illegible] fellers [illegible] in [illegible] the [illegible] an' [illegible] him. Nobody ain't interested in [illegible] pays cash, exceptin' to get the [illegible].'

"'I reckon that's so,' says Levi. 'I allus [illegible] for what I git an' go without what I can't pay cash for an' I don't see it [illegible] appreshated partikler.'

"'[illegible],' says the Judge. 'You [illegible] You get what you [illegible] stand on, off for it an' you'll [illegible] in the world. You can't [illegible] in without goin' into debt. Most all o' the big business in the country is done on credit. The United States Gover'ment borrows money to do business with an' what's good enough for the United States Gover'ment is good enough for me.'

If Rufe Had Dunned Him

"'That certainly sounds like sense to me,' says Levi. 'I'll have to study on that,' he says.

"'Hain't your credit good?' says Judge [illegible].

"'I reckon it ought to be,' says Levi. 'I never done stretched it yit.'

"'Then go work it,' says the Judge. 'Work it an' make it work for you. Why, if I had a good credit that hadn't never been stretched I'd do well, I'd do most anythin'.'

"Well, Levi went home an' he studied it all out an' finerly one day he took the hull fam'ly into town an' he had 'em all rigged out in the tonIest kind o' store [illegible] bought the old woman a [illegible] an' a silk dress pattern to boot. [illegible] he ordered a reaper an' machine [illegible] oats an' a new top buggy an' a [illegible] carpet an' a melodeon, an' [illegible] stepped over to the bank an give 'em a note for two hundred an' fifty dollars to have handy in case he needed it at [illegible] time.

"'Now,' [illegible] I'm in the hole good an' deep an' [illegible] get out an' I want. All I've got [illegible] do now is squirm out, but I reckon there's no hurry about it for a day or two. Where did Sam put them there fish poles last week?'

"That's the [illegible] he began to squirm."

"Did he [illegible]?" asked the storekeeper, with interest.

"He [illegible] I last heard from him," replied Hancock. "[illegible] he'd been squirmin' twenty [illegible] they'd sold the farm [illegible]."

"What [illegible] mean by sayin' [illegible] ought to have [illegible] for their groceries?" demanded the storekeeper. "Seems to me you [illegible] nothin'."

"Well, [illegible] have you dunnin' after him," drawled Hancock. "If he had [illegible] he'd got outen the hole th' [illegible]."

Calls Borneo White Women Real "Terrors"

The wild men of Borneo, one of whom is now rounding out the last years of a long life at Waltham, may like Borneo very much, but two American women who braved the terrors of the jungle on the island between Sumatra and Java, declare that it is no place for white members of their sex.

Mrs. Frank Force of Minneapolis and Mrs. McRae of New York, who accompanied their husbands on the 26,000-mile journey that resulted in "really, truly" wild men being brought back to New York, say that the few white women on the island are more to be feared than the most ferocious natives.

"I would not take that trip again," declared Mrs. Force. "There's the awful climate, with the sun so strong that the heat is appalling. It's dangerous to go out in daylight before 3 o'clock in the afternoon. It's impossible for white women to make the slightest exertion, consequently they get so lazy and fat, mentally and physically, that they have little in common with an American woman.

Women Start Trouble.

"It isn't the wild men that the traveller has to be afraid of—it's the English women there. Four white women in a province is a large allowance, yet it is seldom that any of these women are on speaking terms.

"There was one rubber plantation we visited where a husband and wife and her mother were separated by a three hours' train ride from any other white persons. Yet the daughter hardly ever speaks to the mother, and never, if she can help it, to the husband. You see, wherever three or four English women get together the question of precedence comes up, and the woman whose husband gets sixpence a month more than the other's is entitled to go into church and to dinner first.

"Nothing else seems to matter out there, and I know half the English colonials will be kept out of heaven by the question of which is to go in first.

"They don't like Americans at all out there. They think we are crazy. To them nothing seems to be worth while but tea and bridge and brandy and soda. I guess the last is first in their estimation.

First Glimpse of Jungle.

"We spent three very delightful weeks with the American Consul at St. Dakon, Orlando H. Baker but after that when we started on our trip into the interior we had a pretty rough time. Of course there are no hotels, and the officers' quarters had no accommodations for women. We went by train to a rubber plantation at Membakeet, and there we got our first glimpse of the jungle and saw real crocodiles and snakes and monkeys. From there we rode further inland, finally reaching a native village, where with the aid of an interpreter, Mr. Force tried to persuade several of the chiefs to make the trip back to America with us.

"The Borneo natives, you know, are Malays, and I think a good many of the men had been to the coast towns and had seen white women before. But to the native women we seemed to be a revelation.

"These women do all the hard work, while the men loaf and fish, and I told Mr. Force that I didn't know which had the easier time in Borneo, the native men or the English women.

On Guard Against Snakes.

"We couldn't persuade any of the women to come back with us, though we tried everything. They were too frightened. The people, like the Chinese, live mainly on rice and fish, but we didn't suffer for variety of food because we had taken along great boxes of American canned goods.

"I can't say that I was afraid at any time, though often we had to cross rather dangerous bridges—just trunks of trees laid over the creeks—and, of course, one had to be careful of snakes. But I guess the most dangerous product of Borneo is the colonial woman.

THE FORTUNE HUNTER

How a Business Failure Wins Success Through Love and Stick-to-itiveness

By JOSEPH LOUIS VANCE Copyright, 1910, by Winchell Smith and Joseph Louis Vance.

"Anything you wish, sir?" asked Nat.

"Only to see Mr Graham."

"He's out just at present, but I think he'll be back in a moment or so. Will you wait? You'll find that chair comfortable, I think."

"Believe I will," said Burnham with an air. He seated himself. "I can't wait long, though," he amended.

"Yes, sir. And if you'll excuse me"——

Burnham's hand dismissed him with a tolerant wave. "Go right on about your business," he said with supreme condescension.

And Duncan returned to his work in the backyard.

It wasn't long before he found occasion to go back to the store, and by that time old Sam was there in conversation with Burnham. Neither noticed Nat as he entered, ad to begin with, he paid them little heed, being occupied with his task of depositing an armful of bottles without mishap and then placing them on the shelves. The hum of their voices from the other side of the counter struck an indifferent ear while he busied himself, but presently a word or phrase caught his interest, and he found himself listening, at first casually, then with waxing attention.

"I'd Like to Own That Burner"

"That's part of my business," he heard Burnham say in his sleek, oleaginous accents. "Sometimes I pick up an odd no-'count contraption that makes me a bit of money, and more times I'm stung and lose on it. It's all a gamble, of course, and I'm that way—like to take a gambling chance on anything that strikes my fancy—like that burner of yours."

"Yes," Graham returned, "the gas arrangement."

"It's a curious idea—quite different from the one I told you about; but I kinda took to it. There might be something to it, and again there mightn't. I've been thinking I might be willing to risk a few dollars on it, if we could come to terms."

"Do you mean it, really?" said old Sam eagerly.

"Not to invest in it, so to speak. I don't think its chances are strong enough for that. But if you'd care to sell the patent outright and aren't too ambitious, we might make a dicker. What d'you say?"

"Why, yes," said Graham, quivering with anticipation. "Yes, indeed, if"——

"Well?"

"If you really think it's worth anything, sir."

"Well, as I say, there's no telling; but I was thinking about it at dinner, and I sort of concluded I'd like to own that burner, so I made out a little bill of sale, and I says to myself, says I: 'If Graham will take five hundred dollars for that patent, I'll give him spot cash, right in his hand,' says I."

With this Burnham tipped back in his chair and brought forth a wallet, from which he drew a sheet of paper and several bills.

"Then It's a Bargain"

"Five hundred dollars," repeated Graham, thunderstruck by this munificence.

"Yes, sir; five hundred, cash! To tell you the truth—guess you don't know it—I heard at the bank that they didn't intend to extend the time on that note of yours, and I thought this five hundred would come in handy, and kind of wanted to help you out. Now, what do you say?"

He flourished the bills under Graham's nose and waited, entirely at ease as to his answer.

"Well," said the old man. "It is kind of you, sir—very kind. Everybody's been good to me recently—or else I'm dreamin."

"Then it's a bargain?"

"Why, I hope it won't lose any money for you, Mr. Burnham,' Sam hesitated, with his ineradicable sense of fairness and square-dealing. "Making gas from crude oil ought to"——

Duncan never heard the end of that speech. For some moments he had been listening intently, trying to recollect something. The name of Burnham plucked a string on the instrument of his memory; he knew he had heard of it, some place, some time in the past; but how, or when, or in respect to what he could not make up his mind. It had required Sam's reference to gas and crude oil to close the circuit. Then he remembered; Kellogg had mentioned a man by the name of Burnham who was "on the track of" an important invention for making gas from crude oil. This must be the man. Burnham, the tracker; and poor old Graham must be the tracked.

Nat Takes a Hand in the Game.

Without warning, Duncan ran around and made himself an uninvited third to the conference.

"Mr. Graham, one moment!" he begged, excited. "Is this patent of yours on a process of making gas from crude oil?"

Burnham looked up impatiently, frowning at the interruption, but Graham was all good humor.

"Why, yes," he started to explain; "it's that burner over there that——"

"But I wouldn't sell it just yet if I were you," said Nat. "It may be worth a good deal"——

"Now look here!" Burnham got to his feet in anger. 'What business 've you got butting into this?" he demanded, putting himself between Duncan and the inventor.

"Me?" Duncan queried simply. "Only just because I'm a business man. If you don't believe it, ask Mr. Graham."

"He's got a perfect right to advise me, Mr. Burnham," interposed Graham, rising.

"Well, but—but what objection 've you got to his making a little money out of this patent?" Burnham blustered.

"None; only I want to look into the matter first. I think it might be —ah—advisable."

"What makes you think so?" demanded Burnham, his tone withering.

"Well,' said Nat, with an effort summoning his faculties to cope with a matter of strict business, "it's this way: I've got an idea," he said, poking at Burnham with the forefinger which had proven so effective with Pete Willing, "that you wouldn't offer five hundred iron men for this burner unless you expected to make something big out of it, and * * * it ought to be worth just as much to Mr. Graham as to you."

Not Interfering with Kellogg.

"Ah, you don't know what you're talking about."

"I know that," Nat admitted simply, "but I do happen to know you're promoting a scheme for making gas from crude oil, and if Mr. Graham will listen to me you won't get his patent until I've consulted my friend, Henry Kellogg."

"Kellogg!"

"Yes. You know—of L. J. Bartlett & Company." Nat's forefinger continued to do deadly work. Burnham backed away from it as from a fiery brand.

"Oh, well, he said, dashed, "if you're representing Kellogg"—and Nat took care not to refute the implication—"I—I don't want to interfere. Only," he pursued at random, in his discomfiture, "I can't see why he sent you here."

"I'd be ashamed to tell you," Nat returned with an open smile. "Better ask him."

Burnham gathered his wits together for a final threat. "That's what I will do!" he threatened. "And I'll do it the minute I can see him. You can bet on that, Mister What's-Your-Name?"

"No, I can't," said Nat naively. "I'm not allowed to gamble."

His ingenious expression exasperated Burnham. The man lost control of his temper at the same moment that he acknowledged to himself his defeat. In disgust he turned away.

"Oh, there's no use talking to you——"

"That's all right," Nat agreed fairly.

"But I'll see you again, Mr. Graham—"

"Not alone, if I can help it, Mr. Burnham," Duncan amended sweetly.

"You're a Business Man."

"But," Burnham continued, severely ignoring Nat and addressing himself squarely to Graham, "You take my tip and don't do any business with this fellow until you find out who he is." He flung himself out of the shop with a barked: "Good-day!"

"Well, Mr. Graham?" Duncan turned a little apprehensively to the inventor. But Sam's expression was almost one of beautific content. His weak old lips were pursed, his eyes half closed, his finger tips joined, and he was rocking back and forth on his heels.

"Margaret used to talk that way, sometimes," he remarked. "She was the best woman in the world—and the wisest. She used to take care of me and protect me from my foolish impulses, just as you do, my boy."

For a space Duncan kept silent, respecting the old man's memories, and a great deal humbled in spirit by the parallel Sam had drawn. Then: "I was afraid what I said would sound queer to you, sir," he ventured—"that you mightn't understand that I'm not here to do you out of your invention."

"There's nothing on earth, my boy"—Graham's hand fell on Nat's arm—"could make me think that. But five hundred dollars, you see, would have repaid you for taking up that note, and—and I could have bought Betty a new dress for the party. But I'm sure you've done what's best. You're a business man——" done what's best. You're a business man——"

"Don't," Nat pleaded wildly. "I've been called that so much of late that it's beginning to hurt!"

(To be Continued To-morrow.)

MOURNS SOUTH'S LEISURE

MRS. GEORGE E. CHAMBERLAIN, wife of the United States Senator from Oregon, who is enjoying her first season in Washington and is a native of Louisiana, laments that the life of leisure of the South is passing away. "I am of the old South," she says, "and I am sorry that the beautiful life of leisure is passing away. There was a time when women had time to do things; to visit and to keep house; to teach their little ones at home, and to enjoy the society of their neighbors, and to cultivate the gentle arts of home. The South has changed probably less than any other section of the country, but much of the picturesqueness has gone. The secluded and quiet town of Natchez, La., has become strenuous. I can recall the golden era of plantation life and the slaves with their merry songs. It was a delightful existence, and I look back on it with the fondest memories. Everything was done on the plantation in those days. The cotton was not only grown, but it was spun and woven, as was the flax for the napery and linen for the bridal finery of the planter's daughter."

WOMAN LEGISLATOR

MRS. MARTHA A. B. CONINE, a member of the Colorado Legislature, who died recently, was a New York woman who proved herself thoroughly efficient as a legislator and a voter. She introduced the first direct primary bill in the Colorado Legislature in 1897, and was a vigorous supporter of the initiative and referendum. She worked hard for woman's suffrage outside her own State and she was the first delegate sent by a State to a National Suffrage Convention. Her work and her skill as a speaker aided greatly in winning for women in the Western States the privilege of casting a ballot.

Bomb from 'Plane, Czar Now Fears, May End His Reign

Fearing that aeroplane users in Russia might drop bombs on him, the Czar has ordered a rigid censorship and investigation of them. All airships except those needed by the government are to be barred out of that country.—NEWS ITEM.

The Emperor Nick grew suddenly sick
When he saw one day, to his great dismay,
That those pesky Yanks
With new-fangled pranks
Were doing things rare up in the air;
Hitting fast clips with beastly airships;
Engines plying that sent them flying,
Swooping and scooping,
Prying and snooping,
All on the sly, right up in the sky;
But what made the Czar especially glum
Was that ev'ry airship could carry a bomb.

The Emperor Nick sent double quick
For his Minister Prime who uncovers crime
(And also takes pride in what he can hide).
He sent in a hurry and made Cossacks scurry
To find without cease the Chief of Police;
And when they'd assembled
And all duly trembled
With fright at the sight
Of a Czar of such might
He told them to jail each inventor on sight.

"We are now in an age," he said with rage,
When rulers sage are like fromage
De Brie, or a squeeze of cottage cheese:
In fact, we're assailed by demons veiled
As scientists grave or Nihilists brave
Who try ev-ry hour to crimp our pow'r;
A cell of steel
Or a filtered meal;
A bomb-proof walk
Or a screened talk
Are not enough—we must get real rough
And show 'em the stuff that clamps a Czar's bluff."
The Minister Prime, with a will sublime,
And a way quite up with Russia's time,
Straightway went out with his famous knout
And put all thinking men to rout;
The airship folk were placed in a yoke,
Sent to Siberia, there to choke;
Inventors "game" and men of fame
Were likewise put to death or shame.
After which the Czar
Lit a fresh cigar
And with Czarish glee
Drank a pot of tea,
Saying the meanwhile, "Betwixt you and me
My method of ruling is mild as can be,
For when with Progress I can't agree
I go and halt Progress—it's simple, you see."
LOUGH.

LAY OF THE LISTENER

"MONEY talks," the sages say;
But when I hear its dulcet tone
It always seems so far away
I have to use the telephone;
And as I wait its voice to hear,
And care brings furrows to my brow,
Fate answers in a tone severe,
"Ring off! The line is busy now."

THE ATTRACTIVE ADS

WITH magazine before the fire
I sit and nod,
And dream of how I may acquire
A goodly wad.

The "ads" get muddled in my mind,
As well they may,
And, as I dream, the same I find
In queer array.

I dream of planting Plymouth Rocks
Three feet apart;
I dream of growing mighty flocks
From such a start.

I dream of hatching early peas
Beneath a hen;
And raising many broods of these
Within a pen.

The "ads" get mixed, it comes to pass.
I sit and nod,
And in my dreams I soon amass
A goodly wad.—Pittsburg Post.

Teachers Here To Entertain Col. Roosevelt

The local committee of arrangements for the monster convention of teachers to be held in Boston July 2-8 have not given up their efforts to obtain the presence of ex-President Theodore Roosevelt as a closing feature of the conference.

It is understood that James Y. Joyner, president of the National Educational Association, will meet Colonel Roosevelt in New York within a few days and will formally present the invitation of the association at that time. Mr. Joyner's home is in Charlestown, N. C., and on his trip North it is hoped by the local committee that he will be successful in persuading Mr. Roosevelt to come to Boston.

Should the ex-President accept the invitation he will be one of the guests of honor at the most pretentious of the more formal evening social functions of the convention week.

This affair promises to be one of the greatest of the week's features, as it is in the nature of a reception to the retiring officers of the association, and fully 1,000 guests will attend.

The reception is to be held on the night of July 7. The Hotel Somerset will be the scene of the gathering, which will include the officers of the national organization, the State superintendents, the local committees and many State and city officials.

The reception is the feature of the hospitality to be extended by the Elementary Teachers' Club of Boston to the visiting delegates.

Miss Katherine Lahey is in charge of the committee making arrangements for the reception. She is assisted by the Misses Annie E. Bancroft, Katherine A. Kiggin, Florence L. Reddy, Grace A. Cunningham, Grace Mitchell, Mary F. Finneran, Arvilla T. Harvey, Marguerite L. Lillis, Rachel Rosnosky and Emma F. Crane.

MARGARET ILLINGTON HAS FOUND HERSELF, SO WILL ACT AGAIN

NEW YORK, June 23.—"It's foolish for persons to say in this day of actuality, of moralism, that they have been misunderstood; that they have only just found themselves; but as trite as it may sound, as unreal as it may appear to sophisticated New York, I know that it has been my experience.

"I have only just begun to live; I have only just now found the Margaret Illington whom I have for years been seeking to know—the soul of me, the heart of me, the all of me. I am found. I am happy beyond worldly expression, and that is why I have determined to go back once more upon the stage."

As paradoxical as it may sound, no one could doubt who heard her express it, the conviction of Miss Illington.

In her sitting room at the home of their friends and her physician, Dr. Helzmiller and his wife, in East Twenty-eight street, Mrs. Bowes, formerly known to theatregoers as Margaret Illington, then the wife of Daniel Frohman, the theatrical manager, expressed herself regarding her present attitude toward life and the reasons why she has left her beautiful Tacoma home, with its fascinating domestic ties and its equally alluring social life, to again try her fate in the hands of the public.

Margaret Illington.

Has Support of New Husband.

"Don't say very much about me," Miss Illington continued, "before you have said that my ideas as to life, the home and domesticity remain exactly as they were when I met my happiness and married Mr. Bowes. And if my going on the stage was to take me away from him for an hour I should not carry out the most cherished of ambitions. But he is as interested in it as I am. He feels as I do, that I should go back and do the things which I feel are within me to do.

"And now that I have found my heart happiness, that my soul has awakened, now that life resolves itself into the simple, wholesome, beautiful thing that God intends it to be to every human being who will search diligently enough to find the truth, there is no reason why I should not go back.

"No woman or man is capable of doing the best within himself or herself until some wonderful experience, either of sorrow or of great happiness, develops her. I have had both, and now I know life can be the most beautiful thing, the most buoyant thing, and with this radiant dawn of what it all means I am going in my little, humble way, to try and give out in my stage career what I feel about it all.

"I want to do good with what talents I have, and I re-enter the life that had so much fascination with the heart and enthusiasm of a child."

Her Sincerity Undoubted.

And to look at this superbly alive young woman, with her rounded, firm cheeks kissed by Western suns, with red mouth upturned with hope and happiness; with her dark masses of hair waving about her strong, well formed head, no one could doubt her sincerity and not hope that she would succeed to the fullest measure.

"There have been many things said of me; many that have given me nights and days of heartaches. Perhaps I am too sensitive. I am, I know I am," she added in staccato; "but there have been many things that I might have contradicted; others that I might have said in my own defence, but there are some things too sacred, too personal even to discuss. And now I have found this glorious happiness, the little sorrows of a year—two years ago—then so deep, so impelling as to make me ill, have vanished like a rainbow across a sunny sky. Nothing else matters but the NOW and the FUTURE, and I intend with Mr. Bowes's help to make it worth while.

"You see, Mr. Bowes is a devout Catholic and I was brought up a Protestant.

"I am so happy and the future seems so glorious that nothing else in the world seems to matter. Misery and sorrow seem so unreal, and the pettiness of life—why, there is none," added Mrs. Bowes.

"Then your life out West is an ideal one? And still you want to leave it for a career on the stage with its hardships and unrealities?" she was asked.

Will Appear as Lady Macbeth.

"The stage as I formerly knew it has no allurements except as it taught me my limitations and my possibilities as well. The stage that I go back to has every call, for my husband will always be with me. I shall have sympathy, love and kindliness."

Of her stage plans for the future Miss Illington said that her chiefest ambition was to appear in Shakespearian roles.

"I have studied and will appear in 'As You Like It,' 'Romeo and Juliet' and 'Much Ado About Nothing.' I also intend to play 'Lady Macbeth,' and I have recently different views as to how the part should be interpreted than those that are generally conceded. Wait and you shall see what I make of my Lady Macbeth. I hope New York will like it."

Miss Illington has not only adopted her husband's religion, but she has become a more enthusiastic "Pacific Coaster" than the native himself.

"I have had an adorable experience in Tacoma. You see, Mr. Bowes has a beautiful home out there. We have the loveliest social life, and the people have been perfectly lovely to me.

Likes the Western People.

"The Western people are the most sincere, the most loyal, the most whole-hearted in the whole world. They cannot help but be, because they live in a great, glorious country, where nature has been riotous and never was caught in a mean, sordid mood. That's why we are going to begin rehearsals and first be heard in my new home—Tacoma. After that we shall make a brief tour, and then come East. Oh, I hope New York will like my new play and the new ME. For it is a new ME; and a better and a sweeter and a more generous, more worth while ME that New York will see when next I appear before the footlights."

Mrs. Bowes said that the new play is one of the most wonderful that she has ever seen or read.

"I have had it in mind ever since the old 'Thief' days, and I had often talked about its possibilities with Mr. Elsner. So when I found that my husband was willing and anxious as I to go into it, and that I was restored completely to health, I just wired him to make all arrangements, and things are going on splendidly.

"Don't think that I have said the various foolish things that have been credited to me. I never said I wanted to darn socks. All I ever said was that I wanted life and affection and the peace that comes from all these things, and I have them all."

CLERKS AWAIT BIG FIELD DAY

There is an atmosphere of tenseness and suppressed excitement at Gilchrist's Big store these days, for all the young men and young women employed there are eagerly awaiting Saturday when their annual field day takes place.

This field day is one glorious time and everybody, from the most dignified floorwalker to the tiniest cash girl enjoys himself or herself equally well.

This year the field day will take place at Spring Grove Farm, Wellesley. Special cars will take the entire party direct to the grove where a long list of sports are scheduled. They include a baseball game between the married and single men, running races for boys and girls, potato races, fat men's race, tug of war between the single and married men. And for those who like concerts and dancing there will be plenty of both. The management of the affair is under the supervision of the Gilchrist Company's Employes Benefit Association of which Robert H. Heart is president and the following are the committees: Press, Mr. Parsons, chairman, Messrs. Lyttle and Shaughnessy; dancing, Misses Carroll, Howard, Moriarty, Messrs. Stockdale and Butler; athletics, A. W. Phinney, chairman, George Hinkley, Thomas Grieve, Thomas Fitzgerald, James B. Hartford; general committee, H. B. Lowe, P. J. Fleming, secretary, H. J. Knowlton, C. E. Warnock.

TAFT, IN 'EEL GRASS,' LIKES IT

NEW HAVEN, Ct., June 23.—Commencement at Yale ended with the alumni dinner. President Hadley, in expressing regret at the enforced absence of President Taft, said:

"Bill Taft of '78 is in the second mile of the race, and he is in the eel grass. Brethren, some of the best Yale victories have been won over the third and fourth miles."

Great applause greeted this sally. A little later the following message was read by President Hadley:

"It is the best eel grass we ever saw.

ONE APPETIZER IS LEGAL ON SUNDAY

NEW YORK, June 23.—A man may get one drink in each hotel on a Sunday without the waiter risking arrest for excise violation—if he has the nerve, and Magistrate Fitch's decision in the Jamaica Police Court is upheld.

"A man is entitled to one drink before a meal," the court explains, "and to serve it is no infraction of the law.

"The man is entitled to an appetizer, and a waiter, knowing that, is entitled to believe he means to order a meal after a drink."

Under this ruling all a person has to do is to get the drink and forget the meal, then move on to the next hotel and repeat the performance. He must manage to quench his thirst during the dinner hour, however, or the waiter will be entitled to a suspicion and may refuse to fall for it.

The decision was rendered in the case of a Richmond Hill waiter and bartender who had sold drinks of whiskey to two men on Sunday, June 12, and was seen by a policeman. The men went to the hotel during the dinner hour, took seats at a table and got their "appetizer," but overlooked the meal, which wasn't the waiter's fault.

AERONAUT CODY MAY DIE OF HURTS

ALDERSHOT, England, June 23.—Captain S. F. Cody, the ex-American aeronaut, who has been making aeroplane experiments for the British war office, was dashed to the ground to-day in his aeroplane at Laffane Plain. He was seriously hurt and may die. The aeroplane was wrecked.

THROWS BEEF TRUST CASES OUT OF COURT

CHICAGO, June 23.—Judge Landis today threw the government's case against the National Packing Company (The beef trust) and its subsidiary concerns, out of court, and ordered a special grand jury to be summoned at once to begin a more thorough investigation.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

The governors of the New York Stock Exchange have decided to close the exchange on July 2, the Saturday preceding Independence Day.

$ $ $

Bulls have the best of it so far as developments are concerned. All the $22,500,000 New York Central equipment trust notes have been taken, there were rains in the Northwest to help the Spring wheat, the outlook for the bank statement is pronounced good and the biggest shippers in the country said they would accept higher freight rates without protest.

$ $ $

It is said in the Street that the Rockefeller and Standard Oil following is more than moderately bullish now after quite a period of bearishness.

So far as can be ascertained the Standard Oil people do not anticipate anything in the nature of a boom, but look for decided improvement in prices in the coming two months.

$ $ $

Trading is on a light scale, for the public is not interested in the market yet; it is waiting for the movement to culminate. Only professionals will buy stocks in the beginning of a movement. The bears have joined the bulls for the moment in operating for an advance.

$ $ $

The Morganites have been consistent in the position they assumed some weeks ago and have been steady buyers of all sorts of securities. They have been taking Steel common right along, but those in the Street who are best advised do not look for a hurrah movement in this stock. It may be put to 90, and as a 5 per cent. dividend payer this will not be regarded as an unduly high price.

$ $ $

The New York Stock Exchange has admitted to the list $35,051,480 of Goldfield Consolidated Mines Co. stock. Par is $10 per share.

$ $ $

Conditions this year are not anything like as bad as they were last season when dry heat burned the life out oft be crops for two months. There has been excessive rainfall this year and the hot weather can only make the crops grow faster. Even Spring wheat in the Northwest is not damaged.

$ $ $

Two weeks ago the freight rate question was a problem that could be stated, but not solved. A number of railway men admitted this. The Moore-Reid party acknowledged it in arranging for the issue of $20,220,50 Lehigh Valley stock to which old stockholders may subscribe to the amount of 50 per cent. of their holdings. The Lehigh Valley can afford to do it. It is among the highest prized issues in the country and the high quotations are based not only on past windfalls but on the earnings of the company. The net returns for the fiscal year will approximate $13,500,000, the highest by $1,000,000 in the history of the organization.

$ $ $

That the situation is a most peculiar one no one pretends to deny. Money may be had for 4 per cent. or less, good bonds are paying 5 per cent., and the income returns on the majority of the standard stocks is about 6 per cent. It would seem that those with money to invest could find plenty of places to put it to advantage. As yet, however, the investment demand is small.

A special cable from Paris says: "Our operators are greatly interested in the arrival of your Mr. Morgan. It is reported that your leading banker is committed to a plan for the international restraint of copper production as the only way the metal can be permanently placed upon a profitable basis. American producers are to be sounded on Mr. Morgan's arrival. I understand Mr. Morgan has the assurance that European producers will heartily cooperate.

There seems to be very little doubt that General Manager F. W. Denton of the Copper Range Consolidated will become general manager of Lake as soon as the Paine policies are inaugurated. President Paine, accompanied by Mr. R. H. Cross, is expected in Houghton, Mich., next Monday.

Eastern Steamship Company's gross income for May was $116,354, an increase of $4,329 over last year, although there was an operating loss of $5,057. Included in expenses was $23,716 for repairs. For five months the operating loss was $88,132, or $28,170 greater than for the same period last year. A total of $102,254 was spent for repairs during the period, against $61,610 for the like period in 1909.

$ $ $

Very little has been heard this week of the rumor of the sale of 100,000,000 of copper abroad and for which it was stated John D. Ryan was negotiating.

CURIOUS THRONG MORSE MANSION

NEW YORK, June 23.—Curious, and also practical persons, made the tour of the sumptuously furnished home of Charles W. Morse, No. 728 Fifth avenue, the new appointments of which are to be sold at public auction to-day and to-morrow, because he is serving a fifteen-years' term at the federal prison at Atlanta, for violation of the national banking laws.

Visitors walked over rugs which cost thousands of dollars, and sat in chairs of rosewood. Several took their places at the table in the dining room, and viewed the massive silver there displayed.

Everything in the house seems to be catalogued, even to the uniforms once used by the Morse coachmen and servants.

STOCK MARKET OPENS STRONG

NEW YORK, June 23.—Predictions of rain and cooler weather for the Northwest resulted in a strong opening of the stock market in Wall Street to-day. Gains were confined to fractions and shortly after the beginning of trading profit taking developed that caused a reaction of about half a point in the leading issues.

Good buying of the traction shares was in evidence. Nearly all specialties were strong and showed gains of a point or more. In this group American Cotton Oil, Consolidated Gas and Louisville and Nashville were the favorites. In London American shares were slightly higher.

JAPAN WANTS DOOR OPEN TO HER COOLIES

WASHINGTON, June 23.—It is said on the authority of the Japanese embassy that Secretary of State Knox and Ambassador Uchida of Japan have agreed on every article of the future American-Japanese treaty to replace the Gresham treaty, with one exception. This exception covers the exclusion of Japanese laborers from the United States. It is said that Secretary Knox assured Baron Uchida that an effort will be made to obviate the difficulty at the next session of Congress.

The treaty will be the most far-reaching document ever drawn between two nations. Special clauses will be devoted to mutual arbitration agreements, the commercial advantages of the two countries, the definition of naval rights in the Pacific ocean and, what Japan wishes most, a material improvement in the Japanese exclusion laws.

That the attitude of the present administration countenances a radical change in the original coolie exclusion act is known to be a fact.

There is no evidence, however, that the United States will recede from its pronounced antagonism to a flood of laborers from the far East, but there is every indication that the law as it now stands and is interpreted by the immigration officials is regarded as somewhat too drastic.

The business management of the play is under the management of Miss Jeanne Wallach, and includes the following cast: Lieutenant Kenneth G. Castleman, Robert Dunn, Newton Adams, Howard Powel, Lieutenant Charles Belknap, Jr., Mrs. John H. Russell, Mrs. Charles Belknap, Jr., Miss Freda Paine, and Miss Rose Grosvenor.

MANY DROWN IN SHIP EXPLOSION

ST. PETERSBURG, June 23.—There was a panic on board the steamer Russia at Jenotajevsk when the tubes of a boiler were blown out, and many steerage passengers were drowned. As the sound of the explosion echoed through the ship the officers ran about calming the passengers. They were able to reassure those in the first and second cabins, but could do nothing with the steerage passengers, who overcrowded and sank the small boats.

This Young Man Wants a Wife

May He Get a Good One, of the Right Weight, Height and Parentage

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner

Mr. Behncke wants a wife. Read his letter—it is interesting. This letter shows what a very lonely world this is. It is hard to believe that a "good appearing" man, with such precise and good ideas, should need help in his quest for perfect bliss, combined with "plain living."

Mr. Behncke sends us his address with the letter. But the address we do not print. We cannot be responsible for match-making. Marriages are not made in yellow journal offices.

The publication of Mr. Behncke's address, combined with this appealing letter, might send to him some ruthless, wild, modern Cleopatra, with a straight-front corset, and his joyous blacksmith days would be over. The Boston American protects blacksmiths.

The letter WITHOUT the address we print, BECAUSE IT IS INTERESTING. It will make some young women say to themselves, "How happy I could be with that plain living blacksmith, rejoicing in his might and gathering up every stray smile."

It will make others say to themselves, "Well, after all, being an old maid isn't so bad."

Here is the letter:

June 12th, 1910.

Editor Boston American:

Dear Sir—Perhaps you would be kind enough to help me out of my trouble. I am a young man twenty-nine years old, this year, August third. American born of German parents. My weight is 170 pounds; 5 feet 11 inches tall, a good chest development, with perfect health and strength, clean and good-tempered.

I had a good father and a very fine mother. I have taken care of myself since I was 14 years old. Have had quite some experience with most all classes of people in business and other ways, which has given me quite a study of life.

Seriously speaking, I would like to take unto me a "wife," and ask if you could help me find the one of my choice through your paper—one that would be willing to live a plain, happy life, as I do. I live in a nice little cottage, just big enough for two. I have everything ready for the right girl, as soon as I find her.

I have studied matrimonial affairs in every way that I possibly could. And I find, to my way of thinking, and also experience, about fifty out of every hundred newly married couples quarrel and disagree and live unhappy.

Which is brought on by a wrong plan of life, such as overtaxing the body with too much work, rich food, tobacco, alcoholic drinks, strong tea and coffee. Also lose sight of, which I think disorder the whole constitution of man or woman and bring on sickness and worry, and a lot of unnecessary expense, and sometimes death.

I live a very plain life, work quite hard every day as a blacksmith. I never have such a thing as headaches or a cold.

My well being is what I consider the real glory of life, which I have developed through plain living and cleanness, and the right amount of work, rest and self-control.

I love music and pleasure, but business and household duties should be attended to at all times first, and should be as plain and as neat as possible to my idea.

I don't care how poor the girl is whom I get, as long as she has the qualities which I ask, and also will give in return, first of all, to be in good health; of moral sentiment, of high ideal of life, dress neat plain for comfort always; to be a well-balanced, self-controlled, plain person, not less than twenty years of age, and not more than twenty-five; from about five feet six to ten inches tall; weight about one hundred and forty to sixty pounds; American of German parents, preferred; a good appearing person, as I am myself.

This is enough to start on, I think. With these qualities two people could exist happily, and improve with scientific study and practice as they proceed in life.

As the Almighty God has given us great strength and power if we would but seek the proper way to fight, each day can be made more happy and greater by simple, true living. Yours respectfully,

E. H. BEHNCKE.

A Taxicab Driver's Complaint

Doesn't It Sound Reasonable—and in THE PUBLIC INTEREST?

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner

We have received a letter from a taxicab driver. This man says that the drivers ask for a ten-hour day and extra pay for overtime. He points out that a taxicab driver should be thoroughly rested, that when a man "is kept at work from twelve to eighteen hours a day" he is sleepy and apt to do harm.

This is a matter that should NOT be left to the decision of employers or of drivers. It is a matter that should be regulated by the city itself.

It is dangerous enough to have thousands of automobiles flying through the streets. It is infinitely dangerous and stupid to permit the man driving such a machine to work eighteen hours, and to risk the lives of pedestrians for a little extra profit for himself, or the employer who owns the cab.

The opinion of the Boston American is that the taxicab charges, and the whole system, are on a false basis.

If the driver is paid a commission on what he takes in, it is to his interest TO RUSH THROUGH THE STREETS AS RAPIDLY AS POSSIBLE AND MAKE MONEY FOR HIMSELF AND HIS EMPLOYER AS RAPIDLY AS POSSIBLE—and that is against the public interest.

If the men are paid only a weekly salary, without special inducements, they are apt to be less efficient than on the commission basis.

Why would it not be a sane arrangement to charge for a taxicab BY THE HOUR OR BY THE MINUTE—and not by the mile?

Under such conditions, the drivers of public gasoline vehicles might go rather slowly, to make the minutes last—but that wouldn't be a bad thing for the public.

If an ordinary citizen could enter a taxicab, look at a stopwatch in the cab, press a button recording the time when he entered, pay twenty-five cents for the first minute, and a reasonable allowance for each minute thereafter, the taxi owners could run their cabs on a commission basis or a salary basis. The passenger would know what he ought to pay—he wouldn't be at the mercy of an erratic and highly imaginative machine, ringing up dollars and cents with fearful speed. The cars would not be hurt or the public endangered by fast driving.

The above idea is submitted to those that control the destiny of the taxicab.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

MILK CONSUMERS ORGANIZE

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Those who have at heart the protection of the lives and health of children in Massachusetts from the sale of unfit milk have been thoroughly dissatisfied with the handling of the milk question by the Massachusetts Legislature during the last three years.

They have seen indifference on the part of many legislators and a willingness on the part of others to force the lives of children into the balance in the trade and dicker of State politics, thus sacrificing each year the bills that would remedy the present intolerable conditions. They have likewise witnessed in the struggle between producer and distributor an equal willingness on both sides to profit at the expense of the consumer. They therefore propose to give the people of Massachusetts an opportunity to know how their representatives stand on this matter, and to decide whether they really like this sort of thing or not. The citizens of Massachusetts will have an opportunity to show whether they are entitled to continue a share in affairs where there is no practical protection against the sale of dangerous and dirty milk, though all other less important foods are under inspection. Our Pure Food and Drug Act was prototype of that enacted by the Federal Government, but through the greed or ignorance of those who think their personal interests affected it was not applied to milk.

A Milk Consumers' Association of Massachusetts has been formed, headed by a number of the most respected men and women in the State. It intends to demand and secure the legislation needed to protect its children from the shocking waste of life and health exacted by the present conditions. This waste is wholly needless, and our neglect of it has been criminal.

MRS. LOWELL PUTNAM,
Of the Executive Committee, Massachusetts Milk Consumers' Association.

PLEA FOR FEDERAL CLERKS

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I note an editorial for the benefit of the Erie railroad to the effect that the clerks of that road are paid once a month "in spite of the legal requirement that they be paid twice a month." If the requirement is a Federal one, how about the Government clerk, who is paid only once a month, and sometimes has to wait until the fourth day of the following month for his check, which the public in general thinks he gets for doing nothing?

While I am glad, and consider it an honor to say that I am no longer in the Government service, I still have some feeling for my brother clerks and laborers who carry on the work, while the graders who are getting their big fat salaries increased, do nothing but reduce the wages of the men who really are entitled to enough money to buy their meals and bed, let alone leading the ex-President's advice in so far as increasing the population is concerned.

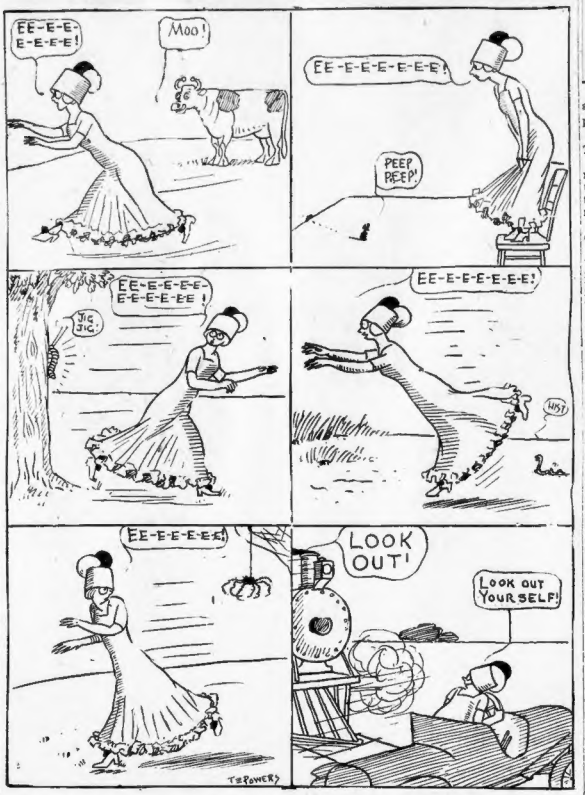

With sincere admiration of the great work the BOSTON AMERICAN and every paper that the Hon. William Randolph Hearst has ever had any connection with is doing, I am,

H. O'N.

Governor Draper Is Not Well Informed

His "So-Far-as-I-Know" Tribute to the Civil Service Commission Is Funny. The Smug Complacency of the Commission Is Touching

Governor Draper's letter to Jeremiah J. McCarthy, surveyor of the port, must impress the public as a weak attempt at justification of his course in refusing to refer Mr. McCarthy's complaint against the Civil Service Commission to the Executive Council for a hearing.

Mr. McCarthy honestly believed that he had a just grievance against the commission. The Civil Service Commission refused to approve his appointment by Mayor Fitzgerald as fire commissioner.

Mr. McCarthy would like to know the reasons for his rejection. There cannot be any question of his right to know.

Governor Draper's reply is too bitter in tone to be convincing. It merely proves that he is displeased because Mr. McCarthy had the temerity to demand a hearing. He practically tells Mr. McCarthy that there will be no review of his case and that if he does not like it, he may lump it.

The weakest line in the Governor's reply is this reference to the commissioners, "So far as I know, their work has been satisfactory."

That is a fine bit of sardonic humor. Evidently the Governor thinks that the criticisms of Mayor Fitzgerald; of R. Clipston Sturgis, former chairman of the Schoolhouse Commission; of Edmund Billings, head of the Good Government Association; of ex-Mayor Thomas N. Hart, and many others, do not amount to much.

"This commission, as you know," Governor Draper says to Mr. McCarthy, "is established by law and has specific powers given it by statute. It was not intended that the Governor should review or control its discretion in approving appointments or in certifying candidates for appointment."

If that is a fact, and there is a great deal of doubt about it, this Civil Service Commission is clothed with absolute and despotic power.

We do not believe the people will take Governor Draper's view of his duty with reference to this commission. Does he mean to say that a man having a just cause for a grievance is not to be heard?

The Governor's view is the strongest testimony yet offered in support of the charge that the authority of the Civil Service Commission may be exercised in violation of right and justice.

Governor Draper should bear this fact in mind, that, while basking under the protection of his ruling, the commission is not obliged to answer to aggrieved persons, he, the Governor, must answer to the people for the commission's every act of alleged unfairness.

And he will also be called upon to answer this charge made by Mr. McCarthy, who, in saying that the Governor asked him to refrain from protesting the action of the Civil Service Commission, declares:

"In this connection many rumors were in circulation that men high in the Republican party desired my rejection as a matter of party expediency."

Asserting that one of the highest of American ideals is that of the square deal, the Civil Service Commission flatters itself in this manner:

"No appointee need fear that he will not receive justice at the hands of the commissioners."

In other words, we must take their word for it that the commissioners can do no wrong. They are infallible. Their decision is the last word on the square deal. The only trouble about this opinion of themselves, rendered by themselves, is that the commissioners will have a hard time making the people believe that they are all that they extol themselves to be.

Perhaps it might be well to direct Governor Draper's attention to this statement by Herbert Parker, former Attorney-General:

"I must say that, in my opinion, the conduct of the commission's business at present is dangerous not only to the community but to the welfare of civil service."

We believe this public insistence that the work of the commission is unsatisfactory, which the Governor affects to ignore, will prove one of the biggest obstacles to his re-election.
